Supervisors mull lawsuit on antismog device issue

Should the state Legislature vote to repeal a controversial law requiring antismog devices on 1966-70 model vehicles, the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors may file a lawsuit to prevent enforcement until the new measure takes effect.

So reported Assemblyman Bill McVittie, D-65th Dist. He also plans to introduce a bill Thursday to ask the California Highway Patrol to withhold enforcement, pending legislative action.

The Assembly's Transportation Committee was to rehear today a motion for reconsideration of a bill by Sen. Omer Rains, D-Ventura, which seeks to repeal the antismog device requirement. The committee failed by one vote last week to move the measure onto the Assembly floor.

"But we believe we have that vote and, once the measure reaches the Assembly floor, we believe the NOX device will be repealed" The Senate previously approved the bill.

Since the bill isn't an emergency measure, it would not take effect until Jan. 1.

"But should the legislature repeal the law, then I would argue that to put them on some and not others would be discrimination." The requirement is restricted to the South Coast Air Basin.

By introducing the resolution, McVittie said he wants the highway patrol to know that legislators are trying to enact legislation to repeal the law. "I would hope the CHP would withhold enforcement." The highway patrol began Tuesday citing those vehicles found in violation.

McVittie said he would expect the Los Angeles County supervisors to file a lawsuit to restrain the enforcement of the devices until the repeal would be enacted.

"Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has indicated he would file such a lawsuit," he added.

The antismog devices, however, are being supported by environmentalists and also Tom Quinn, air pollution control adviser for Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

"Quinn has insisted these devices are worthwhile and is a step toward solving the air pollution problem," said McVittie.

McVittie said Brown will have to decide to veto or support the measure if the matter is approved by the Assembly.

Simon urges higher tax rebates above $10,000 level to stimulate economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon urged the Senate Finance Committee today to revise a House passed $21.3 billion tax cut bill to concentrate more tax rebates for high and upper middle income Americans.

"To stimulate the really soft spots in our economy, the tax cuts must be focused more heavily above the $10,000 income level," Simon testified before the taxwriting committee.

He said the House emphasis on cutting taxes for those making less than $10,000 would not result in purchase of large items such as automobiles, televisions and homes.

Simon noted that 55 per cent of the House bill's tax cuts would go to those making less than $10,000 while President Ford's tax bill would give 78 per cent of the reductions to those making $10,000 to $50,000.

Ford's $16.5 billion program envisioned rebates of 12 per cent of 1974 income taxes up to a maximum of $1,000. The House bill grants 10 per cent rebates but with a ceiling of $200 and an upper income "phase down," leaving those making more than $30,000 with rebates of $100.

"The House bill rejected the President's proposal for individual relief on the ground too much of the total refund would go to middle and upper income taxpayers," Simon said. "I would like to meet this criticism directly.

"We do not think it unfair to refund a flat proportion of the taxes each taxpayer has paid. Such a tax refund is consistent with the principles of progressive taxation because the 1974 tax was corrected progressively."

Simon congratulated the finance committee for its tentative vote on Tuesday to drop a House passed amendment ending the controversial oil depletion allowance.

He said that debating such a sensitive amendment could delay the tax cut bill and, "our economic suffering could be prolonged unnecessarily."

Simon urged the committee to concentrate its tax breaks in rebates only for individuals and increases in the investment tax credit for business. The House bill gives about half its cuts in rebates and the remainder in 1975 tax cuts and special low income tax credits.

Simon said the nation must be careful not to overstimulate the economy, especially with the present tax cuts, because inflation remains a major threat.

OK tax hikes in 2 of 3 school dists.

Two school districts will be getting more money from their taxpayers next year, but a third failed to move its voters in a topsy-turvy election Tuesday.

Chino Unified School District voters ousted two incumbents and forced the third into a "flip-off."

But a runoff election was averted in Pomona when Mayor Ray Lepire polled a majority over his three opponents. It is the first time in 14 years that Pomona voters have elected a mayor outright in the primary.

The year-round school issue may have caused the downfall of trustees Eva Weiszbrod and Charles Smith in Chino. They were defeated by challengers Lyle Briggs and Roy Ward, who oppose the system. The third incumbent, Pete Vander Poel, polled the same number of votes as challenger Patrick Hooven. They will draw for the seat later this month.

The unexpectedly heavy vote also washed out another incumbent, Charles Hall, in the Mt. San Antonio College District, in favor of Travis L. Manning, and witnessed the defeat of a Chino proposal to raise the interest rate on bonds already approved.

Both the Claremont and the Bonita School District of La Verne and San Dimas passed override issues by 2 to 1 margins. A similar proposal was defeated decisively by voters in the Chaffey Union High School District, which covers Ontario, Montclair, Upland, and Alta Loma.

Meanwhile, some election officials had their problems getting to the results Tuesday.

The counting of votes in the West End of San Bernardino County was delayed Tuesday because of the long distance involved in transporting the ballots to Bernardino for processing in the county's computer system. Final results in the Chaffey, Chino and Upland school districts weren't reported until 1 a.m. today.

Bonita Unified School District received its first precinct report at 10:15 p.m., and by 11:15 p.m., only 16 precincts had reported in. The final precinct reported in at 1:35 a.m.

Precinct workers from one precinct brought their container to the school district at 8:35 p.m., not realizing they were to count the votes. They were sent back to their polling spot and began the long count.

Racial tension, anti-Semitism

Meany fears explosion over economic woes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO president George Meany says the country is sitting on a powder keg and could face serious racial tension and anti-Semitism if economic conditions do not improve.

The outspoken labor leader also accused the Arab governments of using the tactics of Adolph Hitler in blacklisting American companies which do business with Israel.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller presented Meany with a brotherhood citation at the 26th annual conference of the National Conference of Christians and Jews Tuesday night.

"The administration that has been in office since January of 1969 has thrown this nation into an economic crisis unknown since the Great Depression of the 1930s," Meany said.

He added that "unemployment is feeding on unemployment" and said that while the nationwide figure stands at 8.2 per cent it also shows 13.4 per cent unemployment for blacks, 20.8 per cent for teen-agers and 41.1 per cent for black teenagers.

"We are sitting on human dynamite," he said. "As these figures rise, racial tensions and prejudice are bound to rise. If it continues to go downhill it can become the breeding ground of social unrest ... including anti-Semitism.

"We know from history anti-Semitism heightens at times of economic and social stress," Meany said.

He added that on the international scene "powerful waves of anti-Semitism are eminating from the Middle East.

Patty Hearst's sister arrested on drug charge

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — U.S. Customs agents arrested Anne Randolph Hearst, younger sister of missing newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, on a misdemeanor narcotics charge Tuesday as she returned from an auto trip to Canada.

Miss Hearst, 19, was arrested at the Rainbow Bridge in Niagara Falls, N.Y., while traveling with two men. One of the men, Donald Moffett, 21, of Denver, Colo., also was charged. The charges were for possession of amphetamines.

There have been numerous unconfirmed reports in recent weeks that Patricia Hearst, kidnap victim-turned-renegade who has been missing for more than a year, would attempt to cross the border near the same location. Authorities would not comment, however.

A spokesman for the federal drug enforcement agency said Anne Hearst was arrested in a 1974 Ford Mustang auto registered to her father, Randolph Hearst, president and editor of the San Francisco Examiner.

A spokesman for the FBI said the bureau was interested in the case, but he would not comment further.

Customs agents said they found 1.2 grams of amphetamines in the suspects' possession. A third companion, George Boomer of Grosse Point, Mich., was not charged.

Miss Hearst and Moffett entered pleas of innocent at their arraignment before U.S Magistrate Edmund F. Maxwell. Both were released on $1,000 bail pending a court appearance March 19.

Anne Hearst's attorney, George Grobe Jr. of Buffalo, said he did not know when she went to Canada, why she was there or where she had been.

"I haven't had much time to talk to her," Grobe said.

Police across the border in Niagara Falls, Ont., said they did not know what Anne Hearst was doing in Canada or where she had been, nor did they know anything as to the whereabouts of Patricia Hearst.

The whereabouts of Patricia have been a mystery since her Feb. 4, 1974, abduction by a group of terrorists calling themselves the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Anti-war grandma freed--no regrets

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A 64-year-old grandmother who has just completed a 7½-month-term in federal prison for refusing to pay taxes to support the Vietnam war says she would do it all again.

Martha Tranquilli of Sacramento, convicted in 1973 in Clarksdale, Miss., of tax fraud for listing anti-war organizations as dependents, was released Monday from Terminal Island in Los Angeles where she served the sentence.

Mrs. Tranquilli, a former nursing supervisor at a Mississippi hospital, said she would go to jail again rather than support "anything as immoral as war."

She now faces a government civil suit claiming $5,439 in back taxes and penalties for the years 1970 through 1972.

Instead of paying her taxes for those years, Mrs. Tranquilli gave money to poor people in Mississippi rather than have her tax money spent on weapons for the Vietnam war.

$15 billion U.S.-Iran trade pact calls for 8 nuclear power plants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Iranian finance minister Hushang Ansary have signed a five-year, $15 billion trade agreement which includes eight nuclear power plants.

Under the agreement, Iran is to spend $12 billion in the United States for the eight nuclear power plants, desalination plants, 20 prefabricated housing factories, 100,000 apartments and other housing units and five hospitals, plus other items for the production of fertilizers, pesticides, farm machinery and processed foods.

For its part, the United States will import $3 billion worth of Iranian products in the five-year period. Kissinger said it was not an oil barter deal, that the agreement did not provide for any exchange of oil or oil supply concessions by Iran.

Kissinger told a news conference Tuesday the deal was highly favorable to the United States.

"There will be an imbalance of trade in our favor," he said.

On the agreement to sell Iran nuclear reactors, Kissinger said this would be subject to special U.S. safeguards and congressional approval. He added that Iran had signed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

23 Sacramento lobbyists pledge new code of ethics

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Twenty-three prominent Capitol lobbyists have adopted a code of ethics for their dealings with the legislature, it was reported Tuesday.

They are members of Institute of Governmental Advocates Inc., which was created to unite lobbyists' forces in dealing with Prop. 9, the initiative which regulates lobbyists. The group has filed suit to overturn parts of the initiative, among other things.

The code of ethics declares in part, "I will eschew relationships or actions which could be legitimately interpreted as the improper influence of all public officials in the course of the exercise of my rights as a citizen and member of the profession of governmental advocates."

James D. Garibaldi, a powerful lobbyist representing liquor and horse-racing interests, said the code was the institute's way of publicly declaring its members would "live by the spirit of Prop. 9."

Bonita jubilant—tax hike passes on second attempt

CLARENCE SAUNDERS

LESTER STROH

ROBERT RIMPAU

EUGENE BOWERS

LOWELL [illegible]

A whopping 45 per cent turnout in the Bonita School District gave a resounding two-thirds approval to a previously defeated tax override and returned three incumbents to office Tuesday.

But while two of the incumbents won easily, the third, Robert Rimpau of San Dimas, had to wait until the last precinct was in to secure his seat on the school board.

He beat the top challenger, Clell Hoffman of La Verne Heights by 33 votes, collecting a total of 2,243 ballots to Hoffman's 2,208.

The other two incumbents, Eugene Bowers of La Verne, 2,935 andLowell Godfrey of San Dimas, 2,875, led the field of seven candidates.

School officials were most jubilant, however, at the passing of the override measure which gives the district an additional 61-cent tax boost per $100 of assessed valuation.

A total of 3,523 votes were cast in favor of the tax measure, while 1,850 voted against it. This compartes with a 58 per cent rejection last fall.

"I guess we were a lot better prepared this year," Dist. Supt. James Johnson said. "We did a better job of explaining our needs to the people. Our citizens committee did a magnificent job."

The voter turnout, too, was much higher than the 30 per cent expected by the district. A total of 5,554 voters went to the ballot out of a total of 12,275.

Rimpau was trailing all night long, frequently by more than 100 votes. But he caught up as the San Dimas precincts came in, and went over the top with a 34-vote majority from the Roynogn school precinct in La Verne, which was the last to finish counting.

The vote ranged from 20 per cent in some precincts to 68 per cent at Precinct 9, in La Verne.

Other candidates received the following votes:

Lawrence Ytuarte, 1,803; Jeff Nadelman, 1,069; and Betty Munro, 1,476.

Chaffey College incumbents win

Voters in the Chaffey College district returned the three incumbents to the board of trustees by comfortable margins.

In light balloting, Ontario attorney Herschel R. Glenn, board chairman, received 14,336 votes, 28.5 per cent of the total; Clarence H. Saunders, chief administrator of Campus View School, received 14,374 votes (28.2 per cent); and Upland physician, Dr. Lester Stroh, garnered 13,882 (27.2 per cent).

The only challenger for the three open positions, Fontana football coach John Tyree, drew 8,172 votes (16.0 per cent).

Chino turns to consultant for master plan of street

Despite loud objections from Councilman Leonard Frketich, the Chino City Council voted Tuesday night to hire a consultant for master planning of Riverside Drive.

Cost of the work is expected to total $7,500 with $5,500 for the consultant and $2,000 for city staff completing aerial photographs, soils testing and pavement analysis.

The council voted 3-0, with one abstention, to hire L. D. King Engineering Co. of Ontario for the consulting work. Three other firms, including VTN Engineering Co., submitted bids.

Vice Mayor Ed Lynch abstained from voting because he is employed as an engineer with VTN. Mayor Bob McLeod was absent from the meeting.

Frketich, who later voted in favor of hiring the consultant, complained that, "Every time we dig a hole in Riverside Drive, we need someone to come in and tell us how deep and how round the hole should be.'

"We make it into a big deal every time. It's like a three-ring circus."

John Gerardi, the city's public works director, claimed the staff doesn't have the "expertise" to perform the work. "Also, we can't take the large block of time out necessary to do it," he said. "It isn't a simple street realignment."

Frketich shot back, "I didn't say anything about our staff doing the job." But he did not suggest who should.

Councilwoman Eileen Carter, who moved to approve the contract with L. D. King, said, "It's not all that costly for what's involved."

Riverside is the city's main east-west thoroughfare and currently handles about 14,000 vehicles per day in the vicinity of Central Avenue. "With our anticipated growth," said Gerardi in a staff report, "Riverside Drive will assume a significantly greater role as a major artery and it is therefore appropriate for the street to be master planned . . . "

Gerardi proposes to first master plan the street, and then consider using future federal funds for reconstruction. First phase of the project would be from Central to the west city limits.

In other action, the council recommended reappointment of Martin Echito and Marcel Valois as city representatives on the Chino Rural Fire District board of commissioners. Final appointment is made by the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors.

Also, councilmen approved a resolution urging legislators to name the proposed Loma Linda veterans' hospital "The Jerry Pettis Memorial Veterans' Hospital," in memory of the former congressman who died recently in a plane crash. State and national political leaders have been pushing for the naming.

Valley housing unit impresses HUD official

WASHINGTON — The Valley Association of Cities (VAC), a 10-city association fighting abandoned housing in the valley area, may be considered as a model program on the national level by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

In a meeting Tuesday morning with valley officials, Mrs. Carla Hill, secretary-designate of HUD, showed interest in the VAC program that has reduced abandoned housing stock in the valley by 40 per cent in less than a year.

"Mrs. Hill indicated a desire to consider the VAC program on a national level," said Pomona Mayor Ray Lepire, representing both Pomona and VAC at the National League of Cities Conference in Washington.

Lepire, Claremont Mayor Bertye Smith, Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes and Upland Mayor Abner Haldeman later met with HUD officials concerning VAC's community development block grant request, and were told, said Lepire, that the request would be given a high priority due to valley cities' cooperative effort on a regional basis.

Other local officials attending the conference in Washington include Ontario Mayor Plaul Treadway, San Dimas Mayor James Lough, Pomona City Administrator Jerrold Gonce, and Joe Korpsak, VAC executive director.

Carnine, Sarrio win seats

58% of voters in Chaffey high district reject tax

Voters in the Chaffey High School District elected a businessman and a teacher to the school board Tuesday and firmly rejected the district's tax override proposal.

H. J. Carnine Jr., division manager of Sunkist Growers, Inc., Ontario, was the top vote getter with 7,150 or 26.4 per cent of the ballots cast.

Raymond J. Sarrio, a teacher at Alta Loma Junior High School, received 6,109 votes, 22.5 per cent of the ballots cast.

Carnine and Sarrio will succeed James E. Garliepp and Robert Bonde on the Chaffey school board.

Proposition C, the three-step override proposal, went down 9,051 to 6,542. Fifty-eight per cent of the voters said no, while 41.9 per cent said yes.

The proposal was to increase the district's general purpose tax rate by 54 cents per $100 assessed vauation in 1975-76, 70 cents in 1976-77 and 83 cents in 1977-78.

"I feel humble and proud that the people of the community would support me in this voluntary manner," said Carnine. "I am very pleased to get the opportunity to serve. I am very disappointed in the failure of Proposition C."

H. J. CARNINE JR.

"My election is an indication of broad community support, and I hope, lays to rest the concerns of some about a teacher running for school board," said Sarrio.

"I am very happy to be elected. This gives me an opportunity to express my views, and I see some interesting debate ahead. I support collective bargaining with the concept of a binding contract and that is something we'll deal with soon."

Schools Supt. Allan G. Smith, speaking on the failure of Proposition C, said, "The public has been well informed, and has indicated that the district, particularly in these economically depressed times, must revise its programs and expenditures and live within the funds currently available."

The three other candidates in the race for the two Chaffey school board seats were Ken Wright, secretary-manager of the Monte Vista County Water District, who received 4,994 votes; Richard J. Evans, Ontario attorney, 4,525 votes; and Danyel E. Clark, Ontario High School teacher, 4,347 votes.

The school board on Feb. 3, approved some $2 million in 1975-76 budget cuts which included 62 existing teacher positions and 20 per cent of team sports, in the event Proposition C failed.

School restroom target of fire and vandalism

Vandals set fire to three fixtures in a boys' restroom at Pomona High School Tuesday afternoon, causing an estimated $500 damage, according to Fire Chief John M. Fowlkes.

They had stuffed paper towels into the toilets Fowlkes said, damaging two and causing smoke and soot damage to the third. They also destroyed paper towel dispensers and turned over and bent a large trash can in the restroom.

Fowlkes said two teen-agers were seen leaving the area at the time of the fire, about 3:39 p.m., and they are being sought by fire department investigators.

Teacher accused of killing hypnotist

Superior Court gets slaying case

High school art teacher Leroy Jackson Jr., 27, was bound over to Pomona Superior Court on a murder charge Tuesday.

$500,000 bail set

CRESCENT CITY (UPI) — Bail was set Tuesday at $500,000 for Robert P. Sander, 23, Cincinnati, Ohio, charged with the sniper slayings of five persons at a coastal resort motel.

Sander was arraigned in Justice Court, and a preliminary hearing was set for March 18. He was ordered held in the Del Norte County Jail.

The action followed Jackson's preliminary hearing before Pomona Municipal Court Judge Robert C. Gustaveson. Gustaveson scheduled Jackson's arraignment for March 18 and denied a defense motion by Pomona attorney Raymond C. Youngquist that the defendant's bail be reduced from $50,000.

Jackson is accused of murdering Pomona hypnotist Minott E. Edwards, 57, who was shot to death Jan. 24 inside his small office at 351 E. Alvarado St. The victim was shot three times, once in the head and twice in the chest.

Jackson, a teacher at Pomona High School, had been a client of Edwards', but police said that no motive for the shooting had been established. Jackson had complained to relatives that Edwards had been tampering with his mind, they said.

At the beginning of Tuesday's hearing, Gustaveson granted Youngquist's motion that the public (and press) be barred from the session and it was conducted in secret.

L.A. hearing slated for 2 youths charged in killings

Two Pomona youths face a hearing March 24 in Los Angeles Juvenile Court in the deaths of two young men who were shot at a Pomona trailer park Feb. 6.

The two 16-year-olds were among five Pomona youths arrested in the slayings of Dennis Ray Harris, 19, of Pomona, and Larry James Overstreet, also 19, of Montclair. Harris was killed outright in the shootings at 1134 E. Mission Blvd. and Overstreet died the next day.

Police declined to identify the suspects because of their ages — 15 to 17.

Of the five suspects arrested, three were not charged after a study of the case by deputies in the district attorney's Pomona office. Those three were freed. But the two who were charged remain in custody in Juvenile Hall, according to Edward K. Callahan, director of the Probation Department's Pomona office.

Police have refused to reveal the reason for the shootings, except to say there had been trouble between the victims and the suspects at the trailer park earlier that night.

Elementary district election

Rugg, Brandt, Hutson win Upland board positions

By MAE TATE
P-B Staff Writer

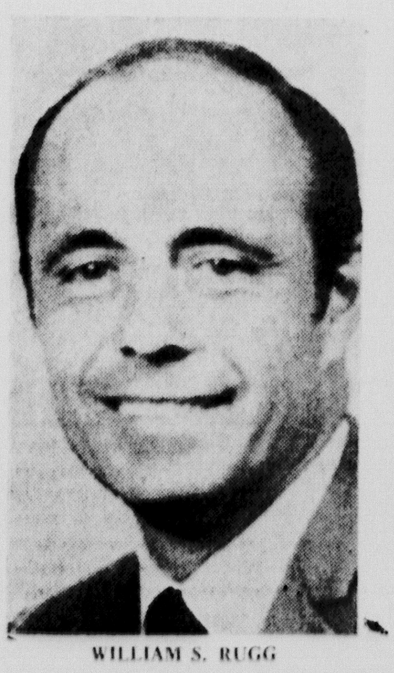
William S. Rugg and Barry Brandt captured four-year terms in the Upland school board race and William G. Hutson won a two-year unexpired term.

Rugg and Brandt beat out Elizabeth Cooper for the full board term. Rugg, the incumbent seeking re-election, won 41 per cent of the votes with a total of 3,664 while Brandt pulled in 3,348 or 37 per cent. Mrs. Cooper, a teacher, had 1,915 votes.

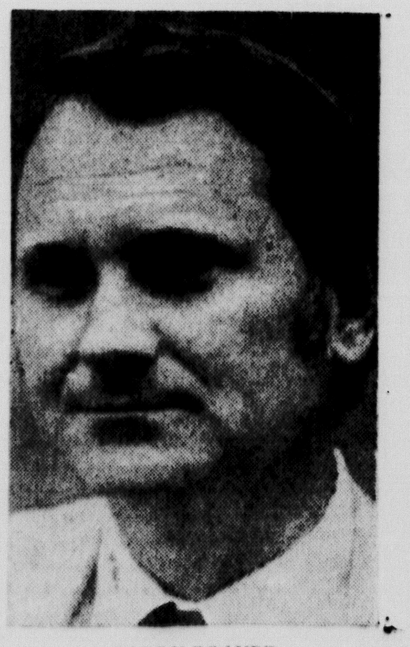
Hutson, a probation officer, received 1,928 votes over his opponents Louis T. Gentile, who got 1,763, and Doris P. Kaichen who received 770 votes.

The two-year vacancy was caused by new legislation which calls for appointments to the board to be provisional following the resignation of a member. The provisional appointment is effective from the date of resignation of the elected member to the next regular school board election. This allows the community the opportunity to challenge the position as soon as possible, according to Supt. Bill Plaster.

Brandt was appointed in September 1974 to fill the term of Irving Schaeekluth who resigned to take an out-of-state business advancement. The Upland attorney decided to seek the four-year term in this election rather than win the shorter term.



WILLIAM S. RUGG



BARRY BRANDT

Rugg, owner of a lumber company, did not know until early today that he had won another four-year term on the board.

"I'm grateful for the opportunity to serve again. Perhaps this indicates that people are interested in the speeding of the tax dollar and I have taken a stand on this. I'm happy to serve again and will put my best into the job," said Rugg.

Brandt stated "I'm pleased, of course. I would like to thank the people who helped me and there were many who did. I hope the people who ran and were not successful will still offer input and help the district and board."

The attorney felt the election of Rugg and himself was more than maintaining the status quo. "We did campaign on a program of good performance, but we were also for improved program. I think people are interested in fine education for their children," Brandt added.

Hutson was not available for comment.

Man involved in death of tow truck driver faces hearing

Douglas A. Kornich, 27-year-old Santa Monica truck driver involved in an accident on the Orange Freeway in Diamond Bar which killed a Pomona man, faces arraignment March 12 in Pomona Municipal Court.

Kornich has been charged with misdemeanor manslaughter in the death Feb. 16 of tow truck driver Victor Macchione Jr., 24. Macchione had stopped to assist an Anaheim motorist whose car had stalled when the accident occurred. Highway patrolmen said Macchione shoved the motorist aside, but both were sideswiped by the truck-trailer. The mishap killed Macchione but the motorist suffered only a shattered kneecap and other injuries.

Macchione was employed by the A & A Towing of Pomona.

Cambodia rice only on black market

U.S. denies airlifted food being withheld

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — U.S. officials denied the government is withholding American-airlifted food from civilians, but rice today for the fifth consecutive day was available only at black market prices and in limited quantities.

A few vendors at each of the four major Phnom Penh markets, virtually deserted by most sellers for fear of food riots, had some rice available for about 30 cents a pound, more than double the official price.

Markets have been closed since last Thursday and 80 per cent of Phnom Penh's food shops shut their doors nine days ago for fear of rice riots.

A U.S. embassy statement denied a UPI story which said the Cambodian government ordered all the U.S. rice flown to Phnom Penh be kept in military warehouses and issued only to soldiers, their families and American-run refugee camps.

The official denial said the UPI story was "completely erroneous" and "without any foundation and fact."

U.S. spokesmen said about 280 tons of rice per day had been distributed to civilian outlets since February —about 3 ounces a day for each of the capital's 2 million residents.

Another 250 tons daily had been distributed to soldiers and their families, 70 tons to civil servants and their dependents and 20 tons to American-run refugee centers, the spokesmen said.

But since last Thursday —the day the U.S. airlift began —no rice has been available on Phnom Penh's legitimate markets.

Residents of the capital said government distribution teams which had been selling rice throughout various districts of Phnom Penh have not operated for a week.

Government officials today confirmed what the U.S. Embassy said in its statement —that all rice airlifted by the Americans has been taken straight from the Phnom Penh airport to military-controlled warehouses of the government export-import corporation.

Soldiers and their families have continued to receive rice, and some of that American-supplied food has found its way to black markets in the capital.

Government sources also said the government of President Lon Nol has ordered the arrest of all civilians found stockpiling more than 220 pounds of rice in their homes.

Military police were ordered to conduct house-to-house searches to apprehend the hoarders, the sources said.

City official sends up smoke signals to communicate with rest of council

The first meeting of the Montclair City Council with the restricted smoking rule has left the council divided.

Councilman Tom McClure, the only member of the group who smokes, sits in the back portion of the audience while his colleagues occupy the council table. During the first meeting Monday with the new rule of smoking allowed in the last three rows only, there were startled reactions from citizens when the lone councilman spoke and voted from his perch in the audience.

On Feb. 18, the council voted 3-2 on the motion, strangely enough, coming from McClure. McClure and Mayor Protem Ernest Rowley, who seconded the motion, vote against their motion for restriction.

City staff members and reporters were noticeably affected by the restriction. The press table was occupied by one lone non-smoking reporter; and city officials bolted from the room for a smoke after the close of the meeting.

Rings of smoke circled the heads of persons sitting in the fourth row of the council chambers.

Demos may be ready to compromise with Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., a main force in the congressional Democrats' energy plan, and some of his colleagues have indicated they may be ready to compromise with President Ford on oil import fees.

As expected, the President Tuesday vetoed the Democratic sponsored measure that would have postponed for 90 days the three-step oil import tariffs.

But in return, the President agreed to order a 60-day postponement of the final two increments of the imported oil tax increase.

"Here's the President going halfway and we're going to go the other half," Pastore said after Ford announced his decision.

By announcing the postponement of his higher tariffs, Ford gives Congress until the end of April to write an energy program into law. But by vetoing at the same time the 90-day suspension, Ford left a reminder he still likes the option of higher import prices to discourage use of foreign oil.

Despite the conciliatory action from the White House, the House Democratic leadership still plans a Thursday vote on whether to overturn Ford's veto.

The Senate has not scheduled an override vote yet and leaders say it may never come up if progress is made with the White House toward energy compromise.

Even with the breathing spell, wide differences remained between Ford's overall energy plan and competing Democratic proposals on Capitol Hill.

House Ways and Means Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said Ford's actions mean "we'll be able to put into place the ingredients for a compromise."

Ullman said he expects his committee can write the tax aspects of an energy package by mid-April. If so, he said, Ford may even delay his tariffs further to give the Senate time to act.

Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., called Ford's announcement "a springboard toward compromise." But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said it is "completely unsatisfactory," because the first dollar of tariffs hurts New England, an area highly dependent on imported oil.

"It really isn't a compromise," Kennedy said.

Communist guns smash airport at Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist insurgents brought up guns to within four miles of the Phnom Penh airport today and slammed in a barrage of artillery, rockets and recoilless rifle fire that halted all commercial air traffic to the Cambodian capital.

The barrage did not slow the American airlift of rice, ammunition and gasoline and commercial planes chartered by the U.S. military took off and landed at the rate of one every eight minutes in an operation reminiscent of the Berlin airlift.

One American plane was hit by rocket shrapnel and sustained minor damage, but flew back to Saigon safely.

American officials in Saigon stressed that the halt in civilian flights to Phnom Penh would not affect the U.S. airlift.

The rebel gunners concentrated on Pochentong airport four miles outside Phnom Penh, an adjacent village and the road linking the airport to Phnom Penh. UPI reporters said half a dozen vehicles on the road were hit by shellfire and abandoned. Pochentong village already was deserted because of prior attacks.

Pentagon sources reported today that a U.S. helicopter carrier with about 1,500 marines aboard has been ordered into the Gulf of Thailand in case it is needed to evacuate American citizens from Phnom Penh.

The sources said a smaller force of Marines at the big U.S. Marine base on Okinawa — roughly 300 men —has been put on alert for similar duty. However, a U.S. Marine spokesman on Okinawa said "We do not comment on any operational activity."

FREED BY KIDNAPERS

Peter Lorenz, right, talks to newsmen in West Berlin today, following his release by his urban guerrilla captors. At left is Heinrich Lummer, a faction leader of Berlin Christian Democrats.

Lorenz held captive in cell

6 days in guerrilla hands

BERLIN (UPI) — Peter Lorenz, the Christian Democratic mayoralty candidate kidnaped six days ago, said today that his urban guerrrilla captors held him the entire time in a cellar cell somewhere in the city, handcuffed and blindfolded.

The kidnapers released the 52-year old Lorenz at midnight with a sack over his head, then disappeared in the city, successfully evading a police sweep that began immediately.

Police carried out a massive manhunt that netted 155 persons, but most were released after their identities were checked.

Eleven persons were arrested.

Lorenz said the kidnapers kept some of his private papers and all of his money except for a 20 mark note (worth $8.50) they returned to him, and enough coins to call his wife from a telephone booth.

The Marxist guerrillas released Lorenz only after West Berlin and West German authorities freed five of their comrades from prison and flew them to asylum in the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen.

Several influential members of Lorenz' Christian Democratic Party demanded reimposition of the death penalty as a deterrent to further kidnapings.

But Lorenz told a news conference that "I was, I am and I will continue to be opposed to reinstitution of the death penalty."

Lorenz said the kidnapers overpowered him in his car early Thursday. With two holding him and a third sitting on him, they gave him two injections, one in an arm, the second in his left leg, Lorenz said.

"While I was not numb, neither was I fully conscious," Lorenz said.

Lorenz said the abductors first drove him away from the scene in his own car. But soon they abandoned it, stuffing him into the trunk of another passenger car. They abandoned it in turn, putting him into a large box or crate in the back of a delivery van. Eventually, the van stopped in front of a house, and they carried the box with him inside it into a cellar where they had prepared a cell.

"My cell was about three meters long by two wide (10 feet long by six and one-half feet) wide," Lorenz told a news conference 13 hours after his release. "It contained a cot, a provisional table and chair, a pail and a place to wash. A grill covered the entrance and a curtain covered it.

"Armed persons guarded me, and I was kept handcuffed and blindfoled most of the time."

2 valley gas stations, market robbed

Two valley service stations and a market were robbed Tuesday.

A Pomona service station at Garey Avenue and Arrow Highway was robbed at 8 p.m. by a man armed with a nickel-plated revolver.

Attendant Leonard Helton, 18, said the man was a Negro, 19 to 21, 5 feet 11 weighing 150 to 165. He wore a white sweat shirt and blue jeans.

Helton said that after the holdup, the gunman was driven away by a woman in an orange Camaro.

A Claremont service station was robbed at 9:15 p.m. at 888 S. Indian Hill Blvd.

Norman Rolling, 38, an employe at Kamil's Mobil Center, said three men drove in, one threatened him with a tire iron and they sped away northbound in a white 1964 Chevrolet after looting the cash box.

The man who threatened Rolling was described as a Negro about 22, 5 feet 10 weighing 165 pounds. He wore jeans with stripes and a green cap.

The 7-Eleven Market at 1550 Murchison St., Pomona, was robbed at 8:30 p.m. by a lone gunman who forced employe Dennis P. Gendreau, 24, to lie on the floor before he fled.

Gendreau said the man pulled an automatic pistol after entering and asking for cigarettes.

The robber was described as a Negro about 6 feet 1 weighing 180 pounds. He had long sideburns and wore a black ¾-length leather coat.

A 57-year-old ONTARIO man complained to police Tuesday that two persons who had given him a ride home from a grocery store robbed him of his wallet containing a small amount of cash and his television set.

Sorcrous Brown of 519 W. C St., told police that he had been given a ride home by a male Negro and Caucasian woman early Tuesday morning. Brown said when they arrived at his home the couple demanded money from him in payment for the ride.

Brown said he refused and the couple left, but he discovered his house keys were missing. Brown said he fell asleep on a chair in his living room. A short time later he said he was awakened by the couple again who threw a towel or cloth over his face and took his wallet. Brown said the pair then took his television set and fled.

Brown described the Negro as 27 to 28 years old, about 6 feet with kinky hair. He described the woman as being 5 feet 5, 130 pounds.

Low priced dental care takes the bite out of vacation tour

TOKYO (UPI) — Group-happy, cavity-ridden, inflation-beset Japanese have found the ultimate vacation tour.

A Tokyo travel agency has come up with a six-day package tour to Taiwan which includes sightseeing and first-rate dental care at one fifth the price usually charged in Japan.

The first tooth tour, organized by Tokyo Ryoko Co. for 15 persons in February, was such a hit that 90 persons have already applied for tours scheduled for March 25 and April 15, according to the agency.

The tooth work is performed by two Taiwanese dentists under contract to Tokyo Ryoko, both graduates of Tokyo dentistry schools and fluent in Japanese.

The dentists charge $1.50 per visit for routine treatment of a decayed tooth and $9 for extraction of a molar, one-tenth to one-fifth the prevailing price in Japan. Cost of an upper or lower set of dentures is $300 compared to as much as $3,000 in Japan.

Apart from dental charges the tour members pay $463 for the trip.

First weekly drop in 3 months

Number of initial claims for jobless pay declines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government reported today that 566,000 persons filed first-time unemployment insurance claims under state programs during the week ended Feb. 22, the lowest number of initial claims in three months.

The Labor Department also said that during the week ending Feb. 15 more than 6 million persons were receiving some type of unemployment insurance benefits, an increase of 125,000 over the previous week.

An estimated 5,037,900 persons were receiving regular unemployment insurance benefits during the week ending Feb. 15, up 51,200 from the previous week. The states posting the highest volumes were California, Virginia, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Arizona.

The number of initial claims under state programs declined 44,500 from Feb. 15. This figure was down sharply from a peak of 970,000 in the week ending Jan. 11 and it was the smallest number of initial claims since the week ending Nov. 30 when 524,000 were filed.

The unemployment rate for workers covered by state unemployment insurance stood at 7.6 per cent for the second consecutive week.

The national unemployment rate for January was 8.2 per cent, with 7.5 million persons out of work. New unemployment figures are due to be released Friday.

About 458,100 jobless workers covered by unemployment insurance filed claims during the week ending Feb. 15 for extended benefits. These workers had exhausted their regular benefits. The total was 58,600 more than in the previous week, the government said.

Kissinger leaves on peace mission to Middle East

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger left today on what may be his hardest mission in the Middle East —persuading Israel and Egypt to agree on further Israeli withdrawl from land east of the Suez Canal.

Kissinger was moderately optimistic of success as his special jet took off from Andrews Air Force Base shortly after noon EDT. He will visit Britain, and possibly Brussels, before landing in Egypt Friday.

The latest shuttle in Kissinger's step-by-step approach to peace in the volatile area could last a month or more. State Department officials believe the danger of a new war between Arab and Jew will increase if he fails to get an Israel-Egyptian agreement.

And it's sold out for a year

New luxury Rolls costs $70,000

LONDON (UPI) — Rolls Royce came out with its latest model today, a two-door luxury car that costs $70,200 — including tax —and already is sold out for at least a year.

Sight unseen, 120 persons from the Shah of Iran to anonymous American businessmen have filed orders for the carpeted, air conditioned, stereo-equipped, leather-upholstered, walnut-paneled, 17-foot Camargue.

The automobile, named for a region of southern France, will get 14 miles to the gallon.

"Our customers expect the best and they are prepared to pay for it," Managing Director David Plastow said. "They are also paying for exclusivity, which is why the Camargue is being built in very limited numbers."

Each car takes six months to assemble. Production at first is at the rate of one a week, later to go to two a week, meaning it will be at least a year before the first wave of orders are filled.

The company reckons the first Camargues could fetch nearly $100,000 on the automotive "black market."

Rolls-Royce has little in common with the rest of the world's automakers. No dip in sales or short-time hours or widespread layoffs in its operation.

The Camargue is the result of three years of secret designing, research and testing. It is of Italian design, with the 17-foot body of soft aluminum done in Britain. The radio and quadraphonic stero is from West Germany.

With a 6,750 cc alluminum alloy V8 engine, automatic transmission, fully independent suspension, power steering and disc brakes, the Camargue can reach 120 miles an hour.

Rolls said it contains more engineering and electronic sophistication than has been packed into any other car. It is said to "think" for itself, even tightening the passengers' seat belts on tight turns.

The walnut paneling is from trees hand-picked in Italy. The upholstery is from a special herd of Rolls-Royce cattle kept behind electronic fences and not barbed wire so as not to mar the hide.

"You must not look upon a Rolls-Royce as a car, as a collection of metal and brilliant ideas," company official Evan Morgans said. "It's a dream".

Miniskirt judge aided by Chief Davis

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles Police Chief Edward M. Davis Tuesday came to the aid of "miniskirt judge" Noel Cannon, who faces removal from the bench for alleged misconduct.

Davis said the judge was the target of a "vendetta by vindictive young public defenders" and was guilty of nothing more than a "belief in God."

The State Commission on Judicial qualifications Monday filed 25 complaints of misconduct against Judge Cannon and asked the California Supreme Court to remove her from the Municipal Court bench.

The 48-year-old jurist, appointed to the bench 12 years ago by then-Gov. Edmund G. Brown, has been a subject of controversy since she wore her thigh-high miniskirts to court, painted her chambers pink and presided in court with her pet Chihuahua dog on her lap as a mechanical canary chirped and trilled in the background.

"Judge Cannon is a victim of young public defenders who systematically attempt to terrorize judges who are not generally inclined to favor criminal defendants," Davis said in his defense of the judge.

G. Keith Wisto, president of the Los Angeles Public Defenders Association, said there was no basis for Davis' remarks, and that public defenders in Los Angeles "have a high professional regard for the rule of law."

To end minimum price

2 milk bills clear hurdle

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation calling for an end to the state's 40-year-old practice of setting the minimum price for store-bought milk has cleared a major legislative hurtle.

On a 5-3 vote, the Senate Agriculture Committee Tuesday approved two identical bills designed to end minimum milk prices at the wholesale and retail levels. The measures do not affect minimum prices at the producer level.

Milk producers and wholesalers expressed fear that an end to controls might result in a "chaotic market" that has been stabilized since the adoption of the Great Depression-spawned pricing laws.

The measures (SB45-61) by Sens. David S. Roberti, D-Los Angeles, and George Moscone, a Democratic candidate for San Francisco mayor, now go to the Senate Finance Committee.

Merle Goddard, spokesman for the California Grocers Association, said the legislation should include safeguards so milk retailers and wholesaalers would not engage in price cutting to drive each other out of business.

Moscone said there are laws on the books which prohibit businessmen from selling at less than cost to eliminate competition.

Consumer groups contend the minimum prices hold milk prices at an artificial high level and if the controls were lifted the prices would drop.

But Larry Maes, executive director of the Dairy Institute, said milk is selling at a lower price in California than most major markets in the country.

He said it would be a "cruel deception" if the public thought they were going to save a lot of money through lower milk prices without minimum prices.

Roberti, who argued the laws governing the retail and wholesale price of milk are outdated, said price setting "artificially keeps the price high, forcing consumers to pay the grocer more profits then they receive from most other foods."

The average statewide cost of a half gallon of milk is 71 cents.

Joe Branco, spokesman for the Federated Dairymen, said if there is a "chaotic market" and wholesalers and retailers go out of business, "some producers in California could end up with some rubber checks" for milk payments.

Roy Alper, lobbyist for the Ralph Nader affliated California Citizen Action Group, said minimum resale prices are costing California consumers $100 million annually in milk overcharges.

"More and more people have come to the conclusion that wholesale and retail price controls are now hurting both the consumer and the industry far more than they are helping," said Alper, whose group has been a prime mover against repealing the state's price-setting power.

A spokesman told legislators the milk price controls have resulted in a high quality product at a low cost and should be continued.

Hard to get DMV data by telephone

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Department of Motor Vehicles is sharply restricting the number of persons who can obtain vehicle registration information by telephone.

DMV Director Herman Sillas Tuesday said the new restrictions were designed to prevent use of the data for illegal purposes.

Previously anyone could telephone the DMV to obtain the name, address and telephone number of a vehicle owner just by giving the DMV the vehicle's license plate number.

Under the new restrictions, Sillas said, anyone requesting information from registration files must have an "identifier number" which is being assigned by the DMV to persons or organizations, such as auto dealers and insurance companies, who have a "proven, legitimate" need for the data.

Sillas said the restrictions were prompted "by a rash of recent claims that the readily available registration information could be construed as an invitation to criminal activities."

A DMV spokesman said one example of how such data could be used for illegal purposes is a burglar obtaining from the DMV the address of an owner of a vehicle parked at an airport. He said the burglar then could break into the owner's home knowing he won't be there.

Sillas said private citizens who urgently need names and addresses based on license plate information can usually obtain the information by calling local law enforcement agencies for assistance.

He said legitimate users of the information may apply to the DMV for "identifier numbers."

One-third San Francisco's population on subsistence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mayor Joseph Alioto said Tuesday there was a "shocking" rise in San Francisco's welfare rolls and that about a third of the city's population now is either on welfare or Social Security and therefore "lives at relative subsistence levels."

The mayor is president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, which is now meeting here.

"I was shocked to learn recently that in San Francisco, which is outwardly affluent, the welfare rolls have gone from 14 to 23 per cent," said the mayor, who placed the number of San Franciscans receiving public assistance at 157,000.

He said that the number on Social Security stays constant at around 121,000, but that since some of these have extra income "it is just an educated guess that altogether those on public assistance and some of the persons on Social Security constitute a third of the population and live at the subsistence level or below."

Mrs. Sue Scarpulla, the aide who helped prepare the figures, said "I know of no comparable statistics on any other cities."

Mayor Alioto, who termed the figures "shocking," suggested that San Francisco had a unique problem because of heavy Chinese immigration.

"It has brought in a lot of those without jobs," he said. "We certainly don't argue with the immigration policy, but there has been no federal program to compensate for

A PRETTY SIGHT — Daffodils blossom and raise their pretty heads in forecourt of Common Market headquarters following several weeks of warm and sunny weather in the Belgian capital of Brussels.

Rookie policewoman loses leg in London train wreck

LONDON (UPI) — For half a day, teen-ager Margaret Liles lay pinned in the foul tunnel of death, a dead man crushed on top of her. Rescuers still couldn't free her from the wreckage of London's worst subway disaster.

Throughout the ordeal the rookie policewoman kept up a cheerful dialogue with men who tried desperately to save her. One asked if she wanted a fellow policewoman sent down to be with her. "No, but you might send me one of the boys," she joked.

Doctors finally amputated her left foot to free her from the wreckage and a later operation amputated her left leg below the knee. By Tuesday the 19year-old woman's plucky bravery had made her the nation's latest heroine.

In the tunnel, recovery teams pulled 12 more bodies from the wreckage Tuesday and estimated the final death toll from Friday's crash would reach 41. The bodies taken from the mangled lead car, the first recovered since Sunday, brought the official death count to 38, with at least three more bodies still to be recovered.

Prince Charles paid an unannounced visit to Miss Liles in St. Bartholomew's hospital Monday. Soon after he left, Margaret gave a thumbs-up sign from her hospital bed and told newsmen what she could remember.

"I knew the crash was coming when I saw the station lights flash past," she said.

"I was standing, but suddenly I was sitting in the dark. My leg was trapped by a lump of metal. A dead man was lying on top of me so that I could hardly breathe.

"There were bodies all around me. But somehow I knew I would be saved. I just felt glad I was alive. I didn't mind what injuries I had."

"It was stifling hot down there," Miss Liles recalled. "There was no point in screaming. I didn't feel too frightened. I just knew I had to wait for the rescue teams.

"The worst thing of all was the awful thirst. My throat was parched. I kept thinking the only thing I wanted was cups and cups of tea."

By her hospital bed was Alan Yates, 19. He talked about marriage, about his pride in "this tremendous girl."

Margaret talked about her future in the police force she joined only four days before the crash. Officers have promised to keep her on the force, if only in communications.

"Wait and see," she said. "I'll be running around in a few weeks. I am just going to forget all about it and go on living as normally as I can."

Child custody based on sex invalid--court

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A mother cannot be awarded custody of children in a divorce solely because she is the mother, the state Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

"The trial court's decision cannot solely be based on the sex of the parent," Chief Justice Horace Wilkie said in the opinion. "The court must make a personal evaluation of this mother's qualities and weigh them against those of the father."

The ruling overturned Circuit Judge Maurice M. Spracker, who awarded custody of a Milwaukee boy to his mother. The father, who had filed the divorce action, appealed the decision.

The high court reversed the judgment and sent the case back for further proceedings on the question of who should have custody of the child.

"The trial court made its award on the basis of an incorrect view of the law and gave an undue preference to the wife," Wilkie said.

Wilkie said state law "makes it clear that sex alone cannot be used as the sole basis for making a custody award. The preference to be given to a mother in the award of custody of a minor child is only one element to be considered.

"The determination must be entirely on the basis of what is in the best interests of the child. We are not satisfied that the trial court gave enough detailed consideration to the question of what was in the best interests of John."

Wilkie said a new hearing must be held in which "both parents face an equal burden, in light of present circumstances, to show what is in the best interests of the child."

Justice Dept. argument

Death penalty should be left up to states

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department, contending that the death penalty is well rooted in the nation's legal traditions, told the Supreme Court Tuesday it should leave it up to the states to decide when that punishment is appropriate.

In a brief submitted for the Court's consideration in a North Carolina death penalty case to be argued some time in the spring, the department said capital punishment deters crime, reinforces important social values such as the "expression of moral outrage," and "incapacitates dangerous offenders."

The brief noted that new death penalty laws have been enacted since the Court in 1972 struck down capital punishment as then imposed by at least 31 states and under federal law. It went on to say:

"In our form of democracy the will of the people is expressed through their representatives.

"We submit that it is utterly implausible that so many legislatures can, time and again, fail to reflect the will of the people concerning capital punishment.

"Were this court to hold the death penalty unconstitutional, it would have to conclude that it —whose justices are not elected and have been given life tenure in order to insulate them from popular and political opinion —is more conscious of and more responsive to the will of the people than are the representatives directly elected by and responsible to those people."

The brief was filed in the case of Jesse T. Fowler, convicted of murder in Wake County, N.C., in the fatal shooting of an acquaintance during a crap-game argument.

North Carolina last April redrew its capital punishment law in an effort to meet the Supreme Court's rejection of existing laws as violating the "cruel and unusual" ban in the 8th Amendment.

The Justice Department said that at the time the amendment was approved by the states, "capital punishment was a common sanction for serious crimes." And it said the Court should uphold a penalty enacted by a legislature "serving legitimate purposes and accepted by contemporary society."

"It is, perhaps, almost too obvious to dwell upon that those who have been executed cannot commit additional capital crimes," the brief said. "Their execution incapacitates them and saves the lives of those whom they would have killed if they had been allowed to remain alive.

"To say that death is inevitably excessive because it affronts human dignity, or imposes suffering, is to beg the question. All punishments offend human dignity and impose suffering to some degree; although capital punishment may be harsh, or even repellent to some, it does not follow that it is 'excessive.'"

House okays bill banning pay toilets

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — One state representative said he wouldn't support it since he "always has a dime in his pocket."

Another said he favored it because "when you gotta go, you gotta go."

A third said the penalty for violating its provisions must be "30 days in the can."

"It" is a bill to outlaw pay toilets in all public buildings and buildings "generally open to the public in the state."

The sponsor, Rep. Sharlyn Linard, D-Dona Ana, said, "No one should be permitted to make money from the misery and discomfort of others."

The bill passed the House on a 57-6 vote Thursday and was sent to the Senate.

Woman stockbroker leaves marketplace to become a nun

TORONTO (UPI) — When Canadian stock prices plunged wildly last year, stockbroker Helen Kirkland decided it was time to break with the marketplace.

She broke with just about everything else, too.

Today Miss Kirkland is cloistered in a convent enroute to becoming a nun. She has a new name —Sister Jessica.

And the turbulent world of bull markets, bear markets and the Dow Jones has given way to peace and tranquility, prayers and meditation.

"Some of my colleagues were a little surprised by my decision," says Sister Jessica, smiling, bespectacled and serene.

"My business was still good but elsewhere there was a feeling of discouragement. A lot of layoffs and mergers. I'm glad I was in the market but I don't regret leaving it."

Sister Jessica, in her mid-20s, began as a secretary in a brokerage house in Toronto's financial district. She moved into sales, took investment courses and began dealing in almost the full range of securities.

She specialized finally in handling the portfolios of "offshore clients" — ambassadors and other Canadians working abroad. She was regarded as a success in a complex field.

Then the stock prices began to go sour as inflation and the energy crisis battered North American economies. Last year was the blackest for investors since the great depression of the 1930s.

Scores of persons in the securities field were laid off or squeezed out of sharply-reduced commissions. Helen Kirkland was part of the exodus.

"But I don't think her decision was brought on just by the market slump," says a former colleague. "It was something else she had been thinking about for some time. We had discussed it on occasions".

Now, at the Convent of the Sisters of St. John the Devine in Suburban Willowdale, Sister Jessica takes a parting look at the market and says:

"I don't know about any longterm predictions. There are too many funny things going on. We won't see much stability for five years, but a wide range of ups and downs. I can't believe the market will improve..."

Flights of Concorde to U.S. given okay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration gave a tentative go-ahead Tuesday for British Airways and Air France to start operating the Concorde supersonic transport on scheduled flights to New York and Washington next year.

Inauguration of the proposed six flights daily would mark the first supersonic passenger air travel ever offered in the United States. It would cut in half the time required for trans-Atlantic flights on subsonic jetliners.

An FAA spokesman said the decision to grant approval for the six flights was made even though the Concorde is a relatively noisy, dirty aircraft because so few planes would have little bad effect on the environment.

The spokesman said final approval would be withheld, however, until after a deadline for public written comment on the decision passes May 6. He said a public hearing on the subject would be held in Washington April 14.

The FAA submitted to the President's Council on Environmental Quality an environmental impact statement backing up its decision. The proposal does not apply to the Russians' TU144, the world's only other supersonic transport.

British Airways and Air France have requested permission to start in 1976 making two SST flights a day each into New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport and one a day each into Washington's Dulles International Airport.

The FAA said any approval it grants would be a one-time measure applying only to those six flights. It said at that number of flights "the volume of Concorde operations will be limited and consequently the environmental impact will be limited."

UAW chief raps Demos' economic recovery plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock accused congressional Democrats Tuesday of settling for timid goals for economic recovery.

Even then, he said, the Democratic program fails to provide a means of achieving those unambitious goals of bringing the unemployment rate down by one percentage point a year.

Woodcock's comments, at a hearing of the Senate Budget Committee, were directed at the alternative energy and economy program drafted by House and Senate Democratic task forces last week.

"Given that this goal is itself far too timid, it is clear that the immense magnitude of the job to be done requires stronger measures than those proposed in the Democratic program," he said.

Grove, Bader also big winners

Lepire wins mayor's post in 4-man race

By ED PRATHER
P-B Staff Writer

Mayor Ray Lepire was re-elected by Pomona voters Tuesday as he outdistanced three challengers in surprisingly easy fashion to gain 54.1 per cent of the vote.

Voters also returned Councilman Charles Bader to office in the 4th Councilmanic District and re-elected Georgia Grove, who was running unopposed in the 1st District.

A total of 7,746 voters went to the polls in Pomona, representing 31 per cent of the registered voters. Lepire finished with 4,135 votes.

Former Mayor Richard C. Browneil and Councilman Adrian Wright ran almost evenly in the second spot, separated by only 57 votes. Browneil finished with 1,663 votes for 21.7 per cent, while Wright gained 1,606 votes for 21.0 per cent. The fourth mayoral candidate, Joseph A. Keenan, finished with 232 votes.

Lepire's victory marked the first time in 14 years that a mayor had been elected in the primary with the necessary majority. That feat was last accomplished by James Baker in 1961.

"I don't know what to say," said a delighted Lepire when notified of his victory in Washington, D.C., where he is attending the National League of Cities Conference.

"I'm grateful for the confidence people have placed in me. I think the vote indicates approval of the new attitude and image I've tried to bring to Pomona. My promise is to be a good mayor every minute I hold that office, and to put Pomona on the map."

Lepire's victory was almost total as he ran in 28 of Pomona's 31 precincts. In seven precincts, he gained 60 per cent of the vote or more.

Bader swamped John Tuttle, retired street superintendent, in winning reelection. Bader gained 4,998 votes for 71.4 per cent, compared to Tuttle's 1,995 votes for 28.5 per cent.

It is the second time Bader has won the 4th District with comparative ease. Four years ago he defeated Margaret Preska by 2,000 votes.

Mrs. Grove's uncontested win marks her first election to a full four-year term. She received 5,438 votes. She was first elected to the council last April, when she defeated two challengers in a special election in the 1st District.

The 31.9 per cent turnout in the Pomona municipal and school district election compares almost identically with the turnout of two years ago when 31.4 per cent of the voters went to the polls.

Claremont tax hike scores victory

By GEORGE MacLAREN
P-B Staff Writer

Voters in the Claremont School District Tuesday overwhelmingly favored a $1 tax override, and swept incumbent Mary Ellen Kilsby and former board member Ernest N. Taylor into four-year terms on the school board.

The override for three years was favored by 59.5 per cent of the voters, 3,834 yes to 2,614 no.

Mrs. Kilsby, seeking her second term on the board, easily outpolled all opponents in all precincts except one where newcomer Forest Harrison outgained her by a mere 25 votes.

With a generous 47.5 per cent voter turnout, Mrs. Kilsby unofficially received 31 per cent of the vote, 3,878 compared to Taylor's 2,748, and 2,317 for Harrison, 1,737 for juvenile officer Gus Kitterle, and 1,714 for William Johnson.

The tax override passed in 19 precincts, but was turned down by voters in the two Pomona precincts and four precincts in the Sumner School and county areas.

Voter turnout ranked higher than the number who went to the polls during the turmoil-ridden year of 1971.

In eight precincts more than half the eligible voters cast ballots. In two southeast Claremont precincts where only 25 per cent voted, the voters favored the override 257 to 91.

Mrs. Kilsby was not available today for a victory statement, because she and her husband are enjoying a brief vacation at Carmel.

Taylor said he was "extremely pleased" with the results, but he stressed that the results are a clear statement by the voters how they feel.

Taylor said that there is a large segment of the voters unhappy with the present status (the module system) at Claremont High, and "I think it should be done away with now."

Taylor said he is "tickled pink that the override passed," but I'm going to be dogmatic about keeping programs in line or reducing them."

Jubilant about the passage of the tax override was Bud Cox, chairman of the Claremont Committee for Investment in Education.

Cox attributed the victory to "the work of a lot of people, and that's what it takes."

Cox said that even on election day, at least 100 workers were on the telephone getting out the vote.

He said he knew the override had passed by 9:30 p.m. Tuesday when it was winning by 500 votes, and then spurted from there.

Even with passage of the override, the school board must cut programs next year by $200,000, but has not decided where the cuts will be. The Administrative Council had proposed 31 cuts by priorities, but the board had only studied those proposed cuts.

Braswell, Whitlock win Pomona school board posts

By PHYLLIS CANNON
P-B Staff Writer

Businessmen C. Allen Braswell and Gene E. Whitlock Jr. were elected to the Pomona school board Tuesday from a field of six candidates.

They will succeed Phillip S. Wessels and James Bell who did not seek reelection.

Braswell was the top vote getter with 3,513 or 26.42 per cent. Whitlock received 2,652 or 19.95 per cent of the vote.

They will officially be seated at the first regular April school board meeting.

"I am determined that I will be part of stimulating greater interest by the community in our public schools and becoming involved in the development of our educational system," said Braswell.

"I feel strongly that as the schools go the city goes. We must work together to bring all resources within the community to bear upon the problems of education.

He added that while he appreciated teachers, and particularly Pomona's teachers, he recognized that there are hard decisions ahead. "There will be some differences of opinion between us, but I have confidence in our ability to work together as a team for the benefit of the children," Braswell said.

"I pledge fiscal integrity and accountability as a member of the school board," said Whitlock.

"I will seek public suggestions and ideas, because that is the only way for public education to progress.

"My election showed a broad base of support, and is a mandate to serve all members of all communities in the district. I will do so vigorously.

Whitlock said that while he supported the proposed May 27 district tax override, he would immediately attempt to meet with other school board members and people in the district to discuss alternatives.

Four other candidates in the Pomona school board race were Frances M. Livingston, who received 2,311 votes; J. Cecil Hoover, 1,963 votes; John D. Kuiken, 1,935 votes; and Ron Foster, 918 votes.

The school board already has decided to ask for a 94-cent per $100 of assessed valuation increase in the general purpose tax rate on May 27, and approved some $1.9 million in 1975-76 budgt cuts as a contingency plan should the override fail. Employes were assured an 8.5 per cent pay increase without the override.

Two candidates supported by foes of year-round school win in Chino

By JOHN MORRIS
P-B Staff Writer

In an apparent victory for those opposing year-round school, Lyle Briggs and Roy Ward won seats on the Chino school board in Tuesday's election, unseating two two-term incumbents.

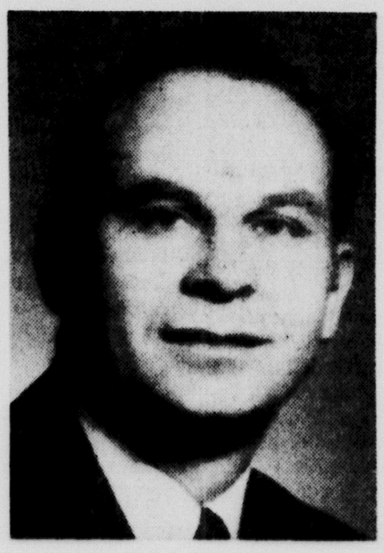
A third incumbent may have to "draw straws" to retain his seat.

Incumbent Pete VanderPoel and challenger Patrick Hooven, another anti-year-round program candidate, finished in a tie for third place, according to semiofficial results from the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors.

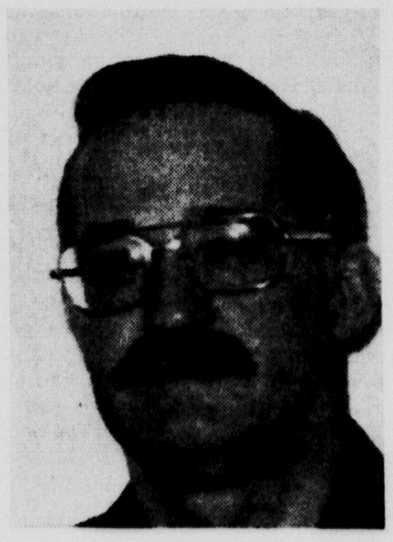
Eva Weiszbrod, the current board president, lost her bid for re-election, and Charles W. Smith, another incumbent, also was defeated.

Briggs collected 1,154 votes. Ward 1,056 and Hooven and VanderPoel both finished with 1,026. Mrs. Weiszbrod got 1,000 votes, Smith 864, Pat Rodriquez 849, John Barcelona 659, Esther Ramirez 186 and Bill DuBreuil 90.

If the race for the third seat between Hooven and VanderPoel officially is declared a tie after vote canvassing, the two candidates will draw lots for the seat, according to a spokesman for the county Registrar of Voters.



LYLE BRIGGS



ROY WARD

Briggs, Ward and Hooven were endorsed as a slate by Citizens for Improved Education (CIE), a group which has been strongly critical of year-round school.

The district's bid to raise the interest limit from 5 to 7 per cent on $710,000 in bonds previously authorized was defeated, barely. Needing a two-thirds majority to pass, it only received 61.7 per cent in favor, and 38.2 per cent against. Officials said the interest rate had to be raised because of the current market.

The percentage of voters who turned out for the election was not immediately available, but it was not believed to be high.

Chino school bus info now on radio

Chino school officials have some advice for those depending on the district's buses on foggy mornings: turn on the radio.

Station KKAR (1220 on the dial) is cooperating with the Chino Unified School District in announcing whether buses are on schedule.

Because of foggy conditions, buses may be delayed some mornings, officials say. But KKAR will inform parents and youngsters about bus runs and should give enough warning for riders to get to bus stops.

Manning ousts Hall in MSAC board race

By BOB NAGEY
P-B Staff Writer

Travis L. Manning, a Hacienda Heights contractor who likes the way Mt. San Antonio College is run, defeated short-term incumbent Charles D. Hall of Diamond Bar, a critic of the board, by more than 1,000 votes Tuesday.

The two other incumbents for the MSAC board of trustees easily won reelection in a turnout estimated at about 30 per cent.

Board chairman Richard Todd, a Pomona mortician, led the field of 19 candidates with 11,514 votes, while William B. Temple, a retired Covina citrus grower and official, was second with 9,560 ballots.

Manning polled 9,428 votes compared with Hall's 8,415.

Although Manning's victory was decisive, it did not appear that way most of the night. He and Hall were very close until the Covina Valley and Hacienda Heights votes came in. Those two districts gave Manning a margin of more than 1,200 votes. Hall was strongest in Pomona where he beat Manning by 300 votes.

By losing, Hall became the holder of the shortest term of office on record in the district. He took his seat Jan. 16, after winning a special election Jan. 7. He will have to give it up to Manning on March 31, when the short term expires.

Some school officials attributed Hall's defeat to the fact that part of his strength came from professional organizations. They said they felt such support tended to cause a backlash among some voters.

Even during the two meetings in which Hall participated during his tenure, there were some clashes between himself and the rest of the board, particularly on the extension of employe benefits, and on the time and frequency of board meetings. Hall wanted meetings held at night at least twice a month.

Other results were:

Ron Boran, 2,185; Leona Bourdette, 2,256; Harry Branscom, 2,510; Loretta Cousar, 3,103; Joseph Damasius, 1,486; Rodney Davis, 3,771; Albert Diaz, 4,087; Hazel M. Haas, 3,098; Ralph Kimball, 3,522; Robert Kirste, 1,329; W. W. Nash, 1,097; John O'Leary, 1,405; Gilbert Ramirez, 5,295; Royell Storing, 3,199.

Opinion

Big Oil spreads it around

"Big Oil" is bigger than most people, including its critics, may realize.

According to a survey released by the American Petroleum Institute, more than 14 million Americans are direct or indirect shareowners of the six largest U.S. oil companies — Exxon, Gulf, Mobil, Standard of California, Standard of Indiana and Texaco.

The survey found that, after the elimination of all duplication, 2,300,000 people distributed throughout the 50 states are direct shareowners. More than 11,750,000 other persons were counted as indirect shareowners because of their purchase of mutual funds and insurance stocks, through participation in pension and profit-sharing or retirement plans, through life insurance annuities, etc.

Altogether, these individuals own nine-tenths of the common stock of the companies and represent more than 6.5 per cent of the nation's total population.

In addition, shares in the six companies are held by 91 colleges and universities and about 1,000 charitable organizations.

In releasing the study, API president Frank N. Ikard said that millions more individuals would be involved if data were available for the hundreds of smaller oil companies in this country. The institute sponsored the study, he said, "to correct the notion that the oil companies are owned by a handful of millionaires."

There are, to be sure, some millionaires in the group. The median family income of direct shareowners, however, is about $16,400 a year.

The survey discovered these other facts about direct shareowners:

—They are significantly older than the rest of the U.S. population. Half are over 60 years of age; eight out of 10 are over 45 years of age.

—Women outnumber men, 54 per cent to 46 per cent.

—Retired persons make up 46 per cent of the total, with a median age of 70.6 years and median family income of $14,100.

—Of the 53 per cent of shareowners who are employed or whose spouses are employed, eight out of 10 are white-collar workers, mostly in professional, technical or managerial jobs or as proprietors of businesses.

—In a third of the employed households, more than one person works either full or part-time.

Citizens say 'no' to arms peddling

If one opinon poll doth a national consensus make, Americans are fed up with being arms peddler to the world.

The American public votes a resounding "No" to continuation of U.S. military aid not only to South Vietnam (three to one against) and the Arab countries (eight to one against) but even to Israel (two to one against).

Such were the results of a national telephone poll conducted by Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J .,among a national probability sample of 1,000 adults aged 18 and over.

The anti-aid sentiment cut across all income levels and all lines of political affiliation, say the researchers.

Just how much this poll, which did not go into any depth, is representative of true American attitudes is open to question. Surely not many people are happy about the prospect of South Vietnam going under to the Communists. Even fewer would wish to abandon Israel to her enemies.

But superficial and simplistic as it may be, the poll does express the growing disenchantment of Americans with our policy, however much that policy has been forced upon us, of involving ourselves in every squabble and rivalry in every part of the world — sometimes even to the point of arming both sides, as for examples, India and Pakistan, Greece and Turkey.

Last fiscal year, the United States, far and away the world's leading merchant of arms, sold $8.3 billion worth of military equipment. Where once it was obsolescent, second-hand stuff, today our clients sometimes receive the latest weapons of war before our own services are equipped.

To instruct in the use of the weapons, U.S. military assistance teams, both government and private under contract, are in no less than 34 countries.

Most recently, Ethiopia, running out of bullets in its fight against Arab-backed, Soviet-armed secessionist guerrillas in Eritrea province, asked the United States for an emergency air-lift of $30-million worth of ammunition.

Which put the State Department in a quandary: Whether to supply the ammunition and jeopardize relations with the Arabs, who are starting to spend beaucoup petrodollars on (U.S.) weapons, or not to supply it and risk a break with Ethiopia.

It is not easy being the Arsenal of Democracy.

School salaries behind cost of living

In response to to J. Cecil Hoover's irresponsible criticisms of the Pomona School Board and its administrators, it is clear that he is ignorant of the facts. He states that if district employes insist on an 8.5 cost of living increase in pay they should hang their heads in shame. He does not state that of these employes, 110 are losing their jobs, thus putting an added load on those remaining who are already so understaffed that needed work is being left undone due to the critical need of more help, especially in the area of maintenance.

This will eventually cost the taxpayers more money in the long run, simply because they refuse to maintain what they have. If your car needs a battery, you get it or you don't operate the car. It's just that simple.

To down our Pomona School District is not very bright when schools all over the nation are in the same boat. Frankly, they are in desperate need. Additional cuts are not the answer; it is the necessity. The only other alternative is close the schools.

As long as the voters choose to disregard the needs of their children, the situation will only continue to worsen. Anyone who has his senses can see what the ultimate end will be.

I have worked for the Pomona School District for eight years. I have seene the good times and the bad. I have had large rocks thrown at me, been insulted openly and have had to hold myself from doing damage to these few. But they are the few.

Mostly, our kids are something to be proud of. Pomona has produced people in all aspects of education that this system is very well proud of. As for J. Cecil Hoover, I can only hope that he is among those few rock throwers. When he pays his bills, as we all must, I can only wonder if he has noticed how much higher they are.

The district employes are so far behind cost of living trends that an 8.5 increase is an insult. We accept being downgraded in this manner, because we know that without the battery, the schools cannot run. Without the voters' support on periodic tax overrides, the children and the parents and the whole Pomona Unified School District are going to continue to suffer.

I know that people are paying more for less. Doctors and insurance costs, not to mention utilities and food costs have risen tremendously. These are without a doubt, bad times. When a tax override is proposed voters see only an added burden, one that they can omit by voting no. But what are they really doing. They are in fact adding to their burden by not spending pennies to save dollars, in the long run. The employes pay the same taxes as everyone else. They also have children who attend our schools. Does J. Cecil Hoover seriously think that we are not concerned. Hang your head in shame, J. Cecil Hoover. — Patrick Moretta, Pomona.

Communist savagery in Cambodia

WASHINGTON — As the fighting over Cambodia approaches the showdown stage, according to classified cables from the U.S. embassy, Communist forces have turned upon the civilian population with a sudden savagery.

The cables describe a bloodbath in the countryside. Villages have been destroyed, and the inhabitants "have been ruthlessly executed by knifing or burning." Even small children have been brutalized.

"The enemy appears to have shifted some of the focus of his attacks from the battlefield to the village," ambassador John Gunther Dean has reported in a grim message to the State Department. ". . . Ignoring static (government) defensive military positions, the enemy has concentrated their attacks on villages, directing their fire at villagers."

Villagers who resist Communist overtures, says Dean, are declared the "main enemy," with Buddhist monks next and government troops third.

"This is not an isolated phenomena," (sic) claims Dean, "but rather seems to be indicative of a new enemy strategy to inflict even more suffering on the civilian population of Cambodia."

The classified cables refer to the opposing forces by their French initials. Government troops are called FANK, and Communist guerrillas are identified as KC.

"FANK has not shown the ability to protect villages from Communist attack," Dean reports tersely. ". . . KC, by keeping refugees off farmland and nonproductive, continues to demoralize their spirit."

Our intelligence sources point out that terror has been used by both sides in Cambodia. Government troops have been accused in the past of ugly atrocities. But the reports from the Cambodian hinterland have seldom been more horrifying.

One cable, telling of an assault upon the refugee camp of Tuol Trach, declares: "Ten villagers were killed, 10 wounded and a few are still missing. Six of the 10 villagers killed were young children, under 10 years of age, and were brutally executed by knife and bayonet after being captured by the enemy."

Dean offers this assemssment of the new Communist ruthlessness: "Inquiries as to motives of the enemy have produced a similarity of response, with the answers varying only in degree of sophistication.

"The refugees express the view that the KC forces control most of the land area but need more people. The attacks are seen by the refugees as enemy punishment inflicted on them for rejecting KC offers to come over to the KC side, or to cease cooperating with the Phnom Penh side.

"Rather than trying to capture villagers and forcibly move them to KC-controlled territory, the refugees feel that the KC wants to demonstrate that FANK is unable to give protection . . .

"Military authorities . . . indicate that the enemy has concentrated on areas where there has been an active effort to put the villagers back into agricultural production, or where there is a strong government-supported village militia."

The cables report that "in some areas, village militia forces have been fairly effective against enemy attacks because the village men sometimes stay and fight until their families have had a chance to flee to safety."

The cables also contend that "in spite of lack of protection which exposes villagers to daily attacks, and in spite of the many hardships of being a refugee on the (government) side, most refugees intimate that they would rather be poor and suffering but have their freedom than live under the stifling regime of the KC.

"This is borne out by thousands of refugees that have fled from KC-controlled areas compared to the almost negligible number of refugees who, in spite of the imperfections and fault of the (government), have moved from government-held territory to the KC side."

Confessions of a happy flopper

Some people think it is just a dismal coincidence that so many atrocious and unbearable programs show up on television. But there is actually a group of specialists called flop agents (called floppers, of course), whose job it is to think up shows so terrible they will inevitably fail, thereby giving the illusion of change to television even when it is groveling around in the same old rut.

One of the most successfully unsuccessful floppers around, is, of course, the legendary 300-pound Grover T. "Vast" Wasteland.

"Come right in and close the door," Wasteland told a recent visitor to his tastelessly furnished chartreuse office. "Hey! Wait a minute there. I think I've just had an idea for a new series called 'Open Door' about an Oriental doctor who moonlights selling sparklers and keeps running into these open doors with special guest stars Barbara Rush and Cesar Romero behind them. Couldn't last more than two episodes."

Wasteland's secretary buzzed him at that point and he picked up his 'phone. "What? Him again? No, look, tell Keefe Brasselle nothing has come in for him yet. I'm not sure even I could do that to America."

Wasteland added, however, that he really is saving Brasselle for the right spot.

"Maybe a series about a tap-dancing baby doctor and undercover panda salesman in the Old West — we could call it 'Frontier Pediatrician'" he mused. "Of course it would have to be pretty bad to live down to some of my other great flops. 'Oh, Susanna,' 'Adventures in Paradise,' 'Sugarfoot,' 'Bridget Loves Bernie,' 'Archer,' 'Khan,' and I'm trying pretty hard on the Cher show, too.

"The problem is, people think it's easy to come up with such rotten shows all the time. But it takes some of the finest uncreative minds in the business to develop your real basic drivel. You can't imagine the tension, knowing that if you slip you might accidentally come up with something like 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' or 'Upstairs, Downstairs' that is not only entertaining but reasonably intelligent. I lie awake nights worrying about something like that happening."

Wasteland, who was dressed in a red-green plaid blazer, orange pants, sandals and white socks, said he is currently looking for a vehicle for Connie Stevens, something along the lines of a policewoman who used to be a nuclear physicist but now spends most of her time bleaching her hair.

"There are some stars, you know," he said, "that you can count on to be pretty crummy no matter what you do with them. But they don't make 'em like Tab Hunter anymore."

Wasteland said that if he ever gets tired of television, he would like to go into candidate-selecting in politics but added he's too busy now to think about that.

"This job keeps you on the run all the time, telephoning, contacting writers, eating egg salad sandwiches. Wait a minute! What an idea for a series: We'll call it 'Hold the Pickle' and it will be about a flop-maker, played by maybe David Cassidy, who will be the adopted son of Zsa Zsa Gabor and Fess Parker, and his hobbies will be counselling would-be suicides and tire-changing and . . . ."

Just in jest

This is most certainly no longer "the land of the free." Just try getting anything for free these days! — Heck, if you even want your car's tires checked or the windshield washed, you bypass the self service aisle at the gasoline station and pay 3 or 4 cents more per gallon for the gas you buy. — But for many of us it is daily becoming more and more apparent that it is still "the home of the brave." — The very brave, I might add, if we are numbered among those unfortunates who can't affort to live in a walled-in community with security guards at all the gates.

Agnew would've fired Kissinger

Today, an exercise in political science fiction.

As most readers of this space know, I spent the years 1970-72 as press secretary to then Vice President Spiro Agnew, leaving that job at the beginning of the second Nixon-Agnew administration — and before the deluge.

In these columns to date, I've avoided in-depth reference to Agnew's fall on fairly obvious grounds. If I were to write something less than kind, it might be taken as a case of kicking a former benefactor when he was down; while anything written in Agnew's mitigation would be read as the work of a onetime flack reverting to type.

Nevertheless, a few evenings ago, among old friends at the Alabama Press Association meeting in Birmingham, I broke silence about Agnew; though not to discuss the events that led to his resignation. Rather, it was to speculate on what might have happened IF — a big if — he hadn't fallen into the coils.

What kind of President would Spiro Agnew — the Agnew the country knew prior to the grand jury proceedings in Baltimore — have made? If Richard Nixon had been replaced by his original rather than second choice for Vice President, how would an Agnew administration have differed from the White House leadership we now have?

I've had occasion to ponder these questions since last August (as I suppose Agnew has). Space limits full development of the subject, but following is a digest of the fictional prospectus I gave the Alabama pressmen:

To begin, in the domestic area, while our current economic problems would no doubt be as severe, I think a President Agnew would have taken a firmer, faster grip on matters, not only because of differences between him and the incumbent in personal style, but also as a result of Agnew's prior executive experience.

A strong case can be made that much of the backing and filling on inflation-recession policy since Gerald Ford took the White House reins can be attributed to his having come up through the legislative rather than the executive ranks.

As a Republican governor of Maryland, on the other hand, the resigned Vice President had a rugged executive course in dealing with a legislative body controlled by the opposition. Indeed, Gov. Agnew's record of working his administration program through a hostile Democratic legislature in Annapolis was given excellent grades by most observers.

As to style, Agnew held fluffy public relations exercises in high disdain. Translated into current terms — and while all else may be speculative, of this I'm certain — if Agnew were President, the country wouldn't have been subjected to the misconceived WIN campaign that gave early indication of Gerald Ford's penchant for mistaking slogans and motion for policy and action.

On the foreign policy front, the difference between an Agnew administration and the Ford White House would have been even more pronounced.

For openers, Henry Kissinger would be long gone as Secretary of State.

Relations between the Secretary of State and Agnew ran hot and cold during the years 1970-72. But personal piques wouldn't have been Agnew's purpose in relieving Kissinger as much as our fictional President's desire to be his own chief overseas negotiator.

Agnew wouldn't have found Kissinger's services nearly so vital as does Ford, especially in dealing with the Middle East. During his years as Vice President, Agnew established a close rapport with Arab leaders. These personal contacts might have well served his administration's conduct of foreign affairs had he become President.

All political science fiction, to be sure. But fascinating as it was to conjure up such fantasies, the reality of what-was-and-is intruded.

Thus it might well have been —as in Harnett Kane's classic speculation concerning a would-be President of a former day — that the fate which befell Spiro Agnew as Vice President would simply have caught up with him, Samarra-like, had he gone to the White House.

"Tell me," a visitor to Louisiana once asked the award-winning New Orleans author, "what do you think would have happened to Huey Long if he hadn't been assassinated?"

"Oh, that's easy to answer," replied Kane without hesitation. "He'd have been assassinated."

Insurance firm now believes --after seeing pay receipts

Since I do not have anyone to help me with my problem, I am turning to you.

I have a policy with American Guaranty Life Insurance Co.

I have all my money receipts for monthly payments since December 1970. Not one is missing

Yet American Guaranty tells me I have not made the October and November payments and still owe the company money — Mrs. F. S., Pomona.

We wrote American Guaranty in Portland, enclosing copies of your money order receipts sent in the latter months of 1974 and early in 1975.

James K. West, manager of the Policy Service Department, promptly telephoned you.

He said your record is now straightened out on the basis of your receipts and asked you to request the post office to put a tracer on payments from October through February to verify the endorsement.

His phone call was followed up with a letter. He apologized for inconvenience caused you and asked you to deduct from your next payment any cost involved in obtaining a tracer.

Almost two years ago I had my upper teeth pulled and a plate made.

At that time the dentist told me he would do whatever adjustment was required for my teeth to fit right free of charge. I have never been able to wear the plates. I have been to two dentists since then. They both told me the bite doesn't match up and it wouldn't do any good to reline them.

It will cost me $225 to have the dental work done properly. I really can't afford it. — Mrs. B. G., Pomona.

Your dentist told us that normally there is follow-up treatment for the first six months after a plate is made.

He said a temporary reline is usually made after one month to take up space left by gum and bone shrinkage, and again every one or two months for the six month period.

But you didn't go back until nine mocths later, he said ,and you wanted a permanent reline.

He stated that you paid $40 for your upper denture, as you had a pre-paid dental plan through your husband's work.

At the end of six months there would have been a $12 charge for a permanent reline if you had stayed on the pre-paid plan. But you had terminated your participation in the plan after having the initial work done and therefore were no longer eligible for a $12 reline. The normal price, he said, is $50.

After having no temporary relines for almost two years, he said, your denture naturally doesn't fit well because of shrinkage.

If you would like to have your denture relined and the bite corrected to proper occlusion, the dentist will be glad to do the work but it will cost $50 as you were told before.

Last November I flew to Oklahoma from Ontario International Airport.

In Oklahoma I called a week ahead to confirm my return reservation. I was told there would be no midnight flights on that date and I would have to take an earlier flight and pay $23 extra.

I am on Social Security and I made the reservation for the midnight flight to save money.

Why should I pay for the mistake made by the airline? I have taken the matter up with the travel agency which handled my reservation but have heard nothing.

When I came home I was flown to Los Angeles due to heavy fog and then to Ontario. My family waited in Ontario all night to pick me up. — Mrs. E. F., La Verne.

Your travel agency told us your refund already was being processed by the airline but it would take six to eight weeks.

Since the people at the agency didn't want you to have to wait that long, they refunded your money right after we contacted them. They will collect from the airline.

We regret that fog is outside our sphere of influence.

ANN LANDERS

Booze in one hand of man makes him lecherous fool with the other

Dear Ann Landers: I am just now recovering from the "party season." The depression lasted five weeks. Please tell me what to do.

My husband and I have been married 11 years. We have two beautiful children. I love him very much, and I believe he loves me. But whenever we go where liquor is served, he becomes one of those obnoxious, lecherous drunks who can't keep his hands off other women. They can be 15 years older than he is, ugly as sin, and still he makes overt, outrageous passes. I am humiliated to death.

I know it's the booze. He never behaves like such a fool when he's sober. I've tried to talk to him about it but he never remembers a thing — says I'm exaggerating or making things up. Any help? —Dying Inside

Dear Dying: Of course it's the booze and there isn't anything you can do about it. The guy should never touch a drop.

One of these days an irate husband might give Romeo a fat lip or open his head with a bottle. That may hasten him on his way to permanent sobriety, which would solve his problem — and yours.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a woman who was reluctant to have her teeth extracted because she was afraid it would interfere with her love life. Her letter was followed by several readers who urged her to go ahead and do it — "better to have dentures than rotten teeth," etc.

I dare you to print the other side. There is one, you know. Haven't you read the ads or been in a drugstore lately? How could you fail to see the dozens of adhesive agents — powders, pastes, and liners for sale — all promising to help make dentures stick?

Sure, some dentures are fine, but a great many are not. I've spent over $3,000 trying to get dentures I can eat with and I'm not exactly rolling in money. I had to go without necessities to pay those dental bills. I finally gave up last year after consulting a professor of dentistry at a well-known university.

I don't have much to laugh about these days, but when I do laugh, my uppers fall down. I'd give my right arm to have my own teeth back again. A good dentist can do a lot to save natural teeth. Mine didn't even try. He said, "You'll be better off with dentures. They're cheaper, too."

Funny how people hate to spend money on their teeth — until it's too late. Then they'll spend a fortune on plastic ones that slide around, make sores and cause nothing but trouble. —Another Witness

Dear A.W.: Dr. Paul Goldhaber, Dean of Dental Medicine and Professor Periodontolcgy at Harvard, says, "Don't give up. Try another dentist. It's worth the effort."

Dr. Goldhaber also said people should insist that their dentist make every effort to save as many natural teeth as possible.

One of the principal problems with extractions is that the bone sometimes continues to resorb and the dentures then loosen. Another problem is that certain patients have a psychological hang-up about their dentures and they cannot adjust to them — no matter what. Good luck to you.

Dear Ann: Because I've learned so much from your column I want to pass on a little tip to your readers who hate to peel onions because it makes them cry. Keep your mouth shut and you'll be completely dry-eyed. —Tenn. Fan.

Dear Fan: That's good advice even if you're NOT peeling onions. Thank you.

Prayer of woman scared by a mouse

Prayer of a woman who is at home alone with a known mouse in the house.

"Dear Heavenly Father: Thou art probably wondering why I am sitting here in the middle of the coffee table with an electric broom in my hand.

"The simple truth is, Lord, that yesterday as I sat meditating on Your goodness, a 15-pound, full-grown mouse with vengeful eyes, who had not eaten since birth, invaded my kitchen.

"I know not for what reason I am being punished, Father, but could we talk about it?

"As You well know, I am not one of the most stable persons in Your flock. (You will remember how the dead water bug in the sink trap who charged me, put me to bed with a migraine for a week?) That is why I was unprepared when You sent me this 40-pound monster that stalked along the wall lusting to satisfy his craving for human flesh.

"I'm sorry I said Ruth Swampfox was such a lousy cook she sliced cheese against the grain and it came out tough. That wasn't very charitable.

"I'm sorry for putting the bathroom scales on the carpet weighing myself, and telling everyone I dropped five pounds in a week. That was dishonest.

"I'm sorry to pretend I don't hear the children calling when I am in the bathroom eating Halloween candy before dinner. That's greedy.

"I'm sorry I let my husband chew the kids out for not taking down a phone message when I remember wrapping my gum in it. That's cowardly. (If this isn't enough, I've got more.)

"I'm a weak person, Lord, but do I deserve a prehistoric rodent with fangs who leaps and bounds from one wall to the next looking for a throat to bite?

"Believe me, Lord, when I tell you, You are the last one to whom I can turn. When I talked to my husband he laughed. Right out loud. (One more joyful noise to You and I'm going to have him committed.) He said to me, 'Do you mean to say that a two-ounce mouse that is one-third the size of your dust balls can cause a full-grown woman to become sick to her stomach? Do you realize you are 5,875 times the size of that mouse?'

"Doesn't he realize, Lord, that I likewise have 5,975 times more fear in me than that mouse? "It's been five hours since I've been 'The Beast' Lord. Maybe he is . . . on my word I'll clean my oven. Now will you knock it off with the wild life?"

Nonsmokers of world should unite

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D...

DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column concerning emphysema you stated that one with emphysema should stay out of cigarette smoke and polluted air. Why not tobacco smoke instead of just cigarette smoke? How can anyone stay out of tobacco smoke when it is permitted in public places?

Why are people working for improvement of health, which includes all personnel in doctors' offices, hospitals, clinics and schools, allowed to smoke while working? Why is smoking permitted anywhere in these buildings as poison travels to all areas? Who should one contact to get help in having smoking prohibited in public buildings and meeting places?

DEAR READER — Tobacco smoke, including pipes and cigars, in the air can be harmful to people with lung disease or with athsma and attacks of chest pain from heart disease. I am in general agreement that smoking should be banned in all public places.

While I agree that everyone has a right to decide whether he wants to smoke or not, I am not convinced that someone who wishes to smoke has the right to pollute the air that another person must breathe. It is really a question of whose rights are being violated, the smoker's by forbiding him to smoke in public places, or the nonsmoker's by forcing him to breathe tobacco smoke-polluted air or stay home.

This is a touchy area. I think those who feel strongly that smoking should be prohibited in public should try to form a national organization to see if they can get Congress to pass legislation that will meet at least some of their goals. This is the only way I can see that this could be brought about.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In your column about the causes for a bad back you mentioned a short leg. Please say something about what should be done in a situation like this.

DEAR READER — Almost everyone has some minor difference in the length of the legs and arms. When one leg is a half inch or more shorter it can be a contributing factor to constant poor alignment of the spine and continual muscle strain. This factor will be even more important if there is some other abnormality in the spine.

The obvious way to cope with the problem is to put a lift under the heel of the shorter leg. If the shortening is minimal, a quarter of an inch increase in the height of the heel on the short side and a quarter of an inch firm pad inside the shoe under the heel will do the trick. It won't be noticeable.

When it is desirable to put a lift under one heel it becomes necessary to avoid going barefoot or going around the house with shoes that have not been corrected for the leg length.

If one leg is a great deal shorter than the other it is wise to see a good orthopedic specialist and have him arrange for the proper footwear for you. Why go through life unbalanced?

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on losing weight, send 50 cents and a long self-addressed stamped envelope to the same address and ask for the "Losing Weight" booklet.

Am asked to identify the world's most tattooed man. That was a Greek named Georgius Constantine. P. T. Barnum said he'd support Georgius, if Georgius would get himself tattooed all over. Six tattooers devoted three months to decorating him with 388 designs which were needled so closely together that not a quarter inch of his natural skin showed anywhere. Even his eyelids and the insides of his ears were intricately ornamented.

More than 15 per cent are now . . . ONE GIRL in 100 starts smoking before age 12. But 36 out of 100 do likewise before age 25.

MOST CASES of bursitis in the elbow are in the left arm. Client asks why. Two reasons: Lot of people, being right-handed, lean on their left elbows while they write, read or drive. And that enormous majority of right-handers, too, spend a lot of time bending their right elbows, so to speak, thus exercising same. Believe I told you that people like painters and paperhangers, whose work requires them to raise their arms above shoulder level, rarely get bursitis.

PUC delays hearings on PG&E rate hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Public Utilities Commission today told Pacific Gas and Electric Co. it was delaying hearings on the company's latest $497 million general rate increase until an earlier $233 million boost request has been decided.

PUC President Vernon Sturgeon said the rate hike — largest in PG&E's history — filled the commission and its staff with "a feeling of dismay" and led them to suggest that the request be dismissed. "Dismissal" of the request would mean that the company could refile it with the commission.

Sturgeon proposed the alternatives of dismissal or a letter to the company spelling out the delay. The commission split 2-2 on this, but then Commissioners Leonard Ross and David Holmes switched their votes in order that action could be taken today.

The letter, which will go to the company, calls attention to the fact that the latest rate increase request came "when this commission is still considering your last general rate increase filed Aug. 30, 1973.

"...The commission has determined that it will be unable to schedule hearings on (the $497 million increase) until such time as work on the general pending rate case has been completed."

The commission said this would be about four months.

The letter stressed that the commission was overburdened. Sturgeon commented at the meeting that the PUC was "overwhelmed" with rate increase requests, and that PG&E itself had various offset increases before the commission and would probably file others.

Sturgeon said there were 738 cases before the commission, including the $233 million general rate request from PG&E to which 26 staff members are assigned and which has taken up 84 days of hearings thus far.

He said that every major company in California has a rate increase request and that even if the commission did nothing the latest PG&E request would be delayed by the PUC's workload.

The PUC president commented that dismissal of the case, which would also allow a refiling at a later date, had the disadvantage of creating an illusion to the public that "the rate case has gone away" and to Wall Street bankers and security analysts that the request was denied.

Reagan critical of Ford liberal appointments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan criticized President Ford Tuesday for making too many liberal appointments in his administration and said Ford should not take conservative support for granted.

The former California GOP governor, describing his political plans as "fluid," also indicated that Ford's bid for the GOP presidential nomination next year could be vulnerable to challenges because Ford has never been approved by his party for national office.

In an interview with UPI, Reagan also expressed fears that congressional investigation of the Central Intelligence Agency could endanger the lives of American agents.

Reagan said he was "not pleased with the tenor" of Ford's latest Cabinet appointments. "I do not believe a President should make appointments on the basis of trying to span a political spectrum," he said. "I think the President should make appointments of people who will implement his philosophy.

Reagan said he agreed that Ford "should not take conservative support for granted" in 1976 and supported an effort by Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., and other conservatives who have organized a new committee to influence administration and party policies.

Reagan said Ford was in a "historically unique position" in that he is an incumbent President never approved by his party or by the people.

Reagan said a description of Ford as "a caretaker President" by Rep. Philip Crane, RIll., was "an accurate description as to the uniqueness of this situation."

Reagan, who is a member of the President's Commission on CIA Activities, said he was "very frightened" that news leaks from congressional committees investigating the CIA would "endanger the very lives" of its agents.

"They (Congress) run the risk of exposing and rendering useless (CIA) people and procedures helping in the defense of our security," he said.

Reagan said he "would not be displeased" if liberal Republicans such as Sens. Jacob Javits, N.Y., Charles Percy, Ill., and Hugh Scott, Pa., left the party because they could not accept the views of its conservative bloc.

"That's up to them," he said. "A party cannot keep changing its philosophy for those who want to keep its name but do not subscribe to its beliefs."

Cop admits he covered up incident

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Officer Thomas Bristow, the controversial member of a special police squad, pushed a drunken driving suspect through a window and then covered up the incident, it has been charged in court.

Bristow, a member of a unit which has arrested three assemblymen for drunken driving, once admitted under oath that he told the motorist he would be released if he "could whip my ass," according a defense attorney.

Attorney John Ewing said Monday Bristow's admission was contained in a Department of Motor Vehicle suspension hearing transcript in the case of Angelo Campos Jr.

Ewing said Bristow sprayed Campos with chemical Mace, handcuffed him and pushed his face through a plate-glass window.

Campos was never prosecuted for drunken driving, but he has filed a $2 million damage suit in Sacramento County Superior Court against the city, Bristow and two other officers.

The issue was raised during the trial of Pasquale Salerno, 34, who was also arrested by Bristow on a drunken driving charge Dec. 28.

The 81-page transcript, Ewing said, made last May, Bristow told a hearing officer that Campos asked to be released and the officer said he could be "if you think you can go ahead and kick my ass."

Bristow was also asked why he had written in a report that Campos was injured trying to escape.

"The reason that's in there was primarily what my sergeant told me to put in there," Brisow was reported as saying.

An attorney for Campos said Bristow stuck with the story until results of a lie-detector examination were given to Police Chief William Kinney and Bristow was asked to submit to the same test.

Nobody cares; just plain folks now, former POWs lament

By United Press International

When the prisoners of war came back from Vietnam two years ago, they received a tumultuous welcome. Cheering crowds greeted them at airports. Reporters mobbed them. In their home towns, there were parades and parties.

Now, life for many of the exPOWs is calm, even humdrum by comparison. They go to school, hunt for jobs —and worry about money.

Few Americans seem to care what has happened to them.

"I'm no different than anybody else now," said Lt. Col. Kenneth Hughey, who was held in a North Vietnamese prison for more than five years. "I've blended in with everybody else."

Hughey, 43, is still in the Air Force and is a graduate student at California State University in Long Beach. In his opinion, Americans haven't forgotten about the POWs. But, he said, "they are more concerned with their own pressing personal problems, like the economy."

Col. Jay Hess, Clearfield, Utah, also was held by the North Vietnamese for more than five years. Like Hughey, he stayed with the Air Force, and now teaches high school ROTC courses.

"Other than the inflation which eats into my salary, I'm having no problems," he said.

Hess said he was not surprised by the apparent lack of interest Americans have shown recently in the fate of the returned prisoners of war. "It's only natural," he said.

Some of the former POWs, like Lt. Col. Floyd Thompson, deputy director of the Department of Army Training Support office at Ft. Benning, Ga., are still having trouble adjusting to life in the United States.

"I'm still working at it," said Thompson, 41, who spent more time in Communist prisons — nearly nine years —than any other American. "I'm doing a lot of living."

That includes taking private flying lessons, going to parties, counseling children of military dependents and writing a book.

Richard Burgess of Yakima, Wash., is having an even rougher time fitting in. When he returned to the United States after spending six years in a prison camp, he received several thousand dollars in back pay —and promptly spent most of it.

Now, he can't find a job and he's seeing a psychiatrist. "I haven't been able to adjust to society," he said. "It is very difficult for me."

Mark Gartley also had employment problems when he returned to this country after four years in a North Vietnamese camp.

In 1973, Eastern Airlines hired him as a flight engineer. Less than a year later, he was laid off. He then ran for Congress as a Democrat against Rep. William Cohen, R-Maine, and was overwhelmingly defeated.

His luck finally changed, however. In January, the Maine state legislature elected him secretary of state.

Now, he would like to see the mood of the nation change.

"It sounds a little corny," Gartley, 30, said. "But you look at the country and see people are downhearted and I think everyone should make an effort to get it together."

It. Col. Robert Jeffrey is also doing well. The Air Force is paying his way through Southern Methodist University where he hopes to earn a master's degree in business administration.

Meanwhile, he's earning good money and recently installed a swimming pool in his back yard.

"We're doing very well," said his wife, Joy. "I think the returned POWs would be the last ones in the country to be upset about the recession. These men lived without anything. They're going to sit back and be grateful because they've at least got their freedom."

THINGS ARE GOING WELL — Bob and Joy Jeffrey hug beside one of their prized possessions, the swimming pool in their Dallas backyard. When Major Jeffrey was released as a POW, Joy had saved enough money from his pay to treat themselves to the pool. Not all former POWs are doing as well.

Photographs of unborn babies aid doctors in obstetrics

By BARBARA D. LIEF

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Most parents cannot wait to photograph their newborn babies. Doctors now can take a picture of the infant before it is born.

This photographic process which has helped doctors make great strides in prenatal care is the same method used by the Navy for tracking submarines.

For medicine, it involves shooting sound waves into tissues and charting the echoes that bounce back. The procedure is painless and causes the mother discomfort only when a cold gel is applied to the abdomen to permit better conduction of sound beams.

"The echo," according to Dr. Rudy Sabbagha, chief of obstetric sonography at Magee Women's Hospital, "comes from the interfaces between tissues of different densities to form a picture."

The picture, called a B-scan, appears on an oscilloscope. And the differing echo strengths can be seen by the picture's varying line formations, with the head showing as a solid line.

Also visible in most sonar scan pictures are the placenta and amniotic fluid and a general outline of the fetus' trunk and limbs.

The use of diagnostic sonar in obstetrics and gynecology is relatively new. It is preferred over X-ray for use in obstetrics because the sound waves are not harmful to the fetus. Sonar also is used in some cancer diagnosis and by cardiologists to examine hearts.

A recent development in diagnostic sonar was gray scale imaging, which permits the images seen via standard sonar equipment to be clarified to the point where the fetal organs, such as brain, lungs and heart, can be identified.

The value of such a development is enormous. If an initial B-scan showed an enlarged head, for example, the gray scale could be used to look at the brain for signs of the disease hydrocephalus. And in the future, doctors hope limb deformities could be seen.

Magee, long in the forefront in natal and prenatal care, was one of the first U. S. hospitals to purchase gray scale equipment, and now the hospital is working to build an improved gray scale that would show the baby's sex. This would be helpful for diagnosing and treating genetic diseases, such as hemophilia, which is active only in males.

Presently diagnostic sonar is used on pregnant women to determine fetal age; fetal growth; fetal abnormalities, such as an ectopic pregnancy or placental bleeding; and fetal position —normal or breech. It also shows if a multiple birth is expected.

"A very big question in obstetrics," Dr. Sabbagha said, "is fetal age because a large percentage of women give the wrong date of their last menstrual period."

A primary indication of fetal age visible through the use of sonar is the biparietal diameter of the baby's head —the distance between the two parietal bones on either side of the head.

In addition to the routine monitoring of fetal age and development, sonar is particularly useful in helping determine the proper care of women with "high-risk" pregnancies, a group so large, Sabbagha said, that it has become a subspecialty of obstetrics.

Supplement to a food may be contaminated

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — About 37 million capsules of lecithin, a food supplement, may be contaminated with a potentially hazardous substance called hexane, the California Health Department says.

The department said Monday its warning involved lecithin capsules distributed to California retailers within the past six months. It said it is uncertain how the human body is affected by small amounts of the compound.

The agency described hexane as a liquid similar to methane and said state food and drug experts are "concerned that continuous doses taken over a long period of time are a potential health hazard."

Lecithin is sold in capsule form as a food product at pharmacies, health food and grocery stores. The department said more than 100 brands and labels probably are involved and that the potentially hazardous material was manufactured and capsuled in Mexico.

The department said that when the capsules are broken open, the liquid inside smells and tastes like motor oil.

Its again time for fortune cookie verses

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It's fortune cookie verse time again, and more than 4,000 verses have been entered in this year's contest.

The theme is "Our World: Keep It Turning."

Among the early entries:

"Only God can keep the world turning —but man could cause its burning."

Another read "At the age of 20, you will win a new Open-road camper."

Judges said the verse wasn't the usual type found in fortune cookies, but added that the event was popular and gave local bards a chance to show their cleverness.

Extra chance in your favor

Opening lead — J ♠

South finds himself in a nice comfortable three no-trump contract. He isn't really happy with the spade lead. It has killed his chance to handle a 4-1 diamond break successfully. If South is just an ordinary, careless, but reasonably good player, he knows that a suit will break 3-2 some 68 per cent of the time. He goes right after diamonds. When the suit fails to break, he struggles manfully to find a ninth trick. The same gods of chance, who caused the bad diamond break fail to cooperate with him and he winds up with eight tricks and a slight headache.

A careful good player looks around before playing to trick two. He sees those four clubs in dummy and reasons that maybe clubs will break 3-3. If they do and diamonds break also he can collect 12 tricks, instead of the 11 he would get by starting diamonds. Far more important he sees that a 3-3 club break can give him his ninth trick if diamonds don't break.

Then our careful player gives himself an extra chance at no cost at all. At trick two he leads a club from dummy and ducks in his own hand. It doesn't matter what West does now. South wins the lead; cashes his ace and king of clubs and has established dummy's last club as an all important extra trick.

MISS IDAHO UNIVERSE — Charlene McArthur, 19, Pocatello, Idaho, who was named Miss Idaho Universe, enjoys an afternoon break in a Portland park. Charlene attends school in the Rose City and works as a sales clerk in downtown department store. Miss McArthur is 5 feet, 7 inches tall, enjoys horseback riding, listening to good music and spectator sports. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie McArthur.

Lockheed laying off employes

BURBANK (UPI) — Lockheed-California Co. confirmed today it has laid off 1,000 employes at its giant aerospace operations since the start of the year and will lay off 1,000 more workers by mid-year, only partly because of the lagging economy.

A company spokesman said the job force reduction from 21,000 employes to 19,000 was being taken at the firm's plants here and at Palmdale, where the Lockheed L1011 Tristar jet is built.

Lockheed also builds two military planes —the S3A Viking and the P3C Orio, both anti-submarine attack aircraft.

"We're in a downward trend in employment," the spokesman said. "The primary reason is that it takes less manhours to build plans than it did a year ago."

He said the job force reduction was being made across-the-board from administrators to office workers to engineers.

The spokesman said the L1011 program, which put its first plane into production three years ago, has matured to the point that it takes 25 per cent fewer manhours to build the jumbo jet than it took a year ago. More than 100 of the jets have been delivered.

"A second reason for the layoffs is the economy — the airlines just aren't sure how many planes they will need in the future and they're stretching out their deliveries."

Last week, Textron Ind., a Providence, R. I. conglomerate, pulled out of a deal to refinance Lockheed's outstanding debit.

Church Women United set World Day of Prayer here

Audrey Lightbody, executive secretary of Pomona Valley Council of Churches, will be the speaker for the World Day of Prayer observance Friday at 10 a.m. at the First Church of God, Pomona.

AUDREY LIGHTBODY

Mrs. Herschell D. Rice is program chairman for the observance which is sponsored by 26 participating churches of the Pomona-Chino unit of Church Women United. The meeting will be preceded by a coffee session at 9:30 a.m. Nursery care will be available for young children.

The World Day of Prayer links millions of people spanning six continents in a chain of prayer. This 89th celebration will be observed by Protestants, Orthodox and Catholic Christians in 169 countries.

The 1975 worship, prepared by the Women's Ecumenical Prayer Fellowship of Egypt, has the theme "Become Perfectly One." It includes elements from a liturgy dating back to the early centuries of Christendom as well as elements born of the Arab experience of Protestantism and Catholicism.

The special day provides for participation in a national offering by which Church Women United make annual grants to international agencies for higher education of women in overseas Christian colleges, preparation and distribution of Christian literature for women and children in Asia, Africa and Latin America; career education for minority women and American Indian youth; ministries among migrant farm workers and ministry in national parks.

In addition, gifts are made to short-term projects to meet emerging needs such as reconstruction and rehabilitation services to women and children victimized by war; ecumenical ventures and international conferences for woman; pilot projects in self-help programs for refugee women; day care centers; family planning, health and nutrition education and clinics.

Extras in case

A plastic "divider" tucked into a desk drawer takes up little room. Yet it makes a great container for an extra set of cosmetics in case you hastily came to the office and left one part of your "face" at home.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Maltreatment

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: Last month, my daughter-in-law left my son and I doubt that she'll ever return to him. I know my sympathy should be for my son right now because he feels pretty bad, but I think he deserved it. I never treated my wife the way he treated his. If I had, I think I would have expected the same thing he got. His wife stayed with him more than 10 years even though he'd get drunk and beat her. She took her 7-year-old daughter with her and a neighbor told me where she thinks they headed. I want to send some money to them for I know they'll have a hard time even though my daughter-in-law is educated and worked before her marriage. I sure don't want my son to know what I'm about to do, because he's not above beating me, too. Do you think I can live with my conscience if I go against my son and help his wife and daughter? —S.P.

Dear S.P.: No one can speak for your conscience, of course, but your letter suggests that your daughter-in-law had ample reason to leave your son. In the past, women who were maltreated often thought about leaving their husbands and running away, but today women do more than think about it.

Your daughter-in-law probably will need help, especially since she has her child with her, but under the circumstances you describe, both she and the child will be much better off in a new and different environment even though there are some economic hardships. The tension and home atmosphere you describe is deeply and often permanently damaging to a child.

According to a recent study of runaway wives, most are of two personality types, says Ed Goldfader, tracer of missing persons. She is usually either the sensitive, sophisticated, intellectual woman who feels strongly the limitations on her life, or the immature woman who married with unrealistic expectations. It sounds as if your daughter-in-law is mature and capable.

Eventually, if she or your son wants to lead a full, normal life they will have to come to some agreement, even if it is only filing for divorce. This present separation may give each time to re-evaluate the circumstances of the marriage and allow each time to decide how the problems are to be solved.

From your letter, it appears that your son needs professional help and guidance badly. His behavior, as you describe it, is not normal and must not only be injurious to all those with whom he comes in contact, but also destructive to him and self-defeating. The best thing you can do for your son is to encourage him to seek help before he seriously injures himself or someone else. His behavior might result from emotional damage, from physiological damage or it might be drug-related. Until your son is examined, there is no way of knowing why he behaves as he does. It's possible he has some kind of brain damage, or the problem may be entirely psychological. Whatever the cause, he is in need of immediate attention. By helping him get it, you may be preventing future tragedy.

It is even possible that if your son received the help he needs now, eventually there might still be hope for his marriage.

FUNNY BUSINESS

To help lawmakers

Drunken driving study underway

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — Does prohibiting the sale of alcoholic drinks during certain times of the day cut down on drunk drivers? Does the availability of other transportation help keep drunks out of their cars?

These are a few of the questions researchers at UC Santa Barbara are trying to answer, in an effort to help lawmakers decide the best way to reduce deaths resulting from drunk driving.

Harold Votey Jr., a professor of economics, said more Americans were killed last year as a result of druken driving than were killed in the Vietnam war.

Votey, working with a team of UCSB economists and political scientists, said national and state laws that concern enforcement, court procedures and penalties revolving around drunk drivers will be compared with national and local drinking habits, attitudes, prices and taxes, etc.

Legislators may then consult these statistics when they investigate proposed measures to curb drunken driving. Some of questions the survey will hopefully answer include:

—Does publishing the names of arrested drunken drivers have a deterrent effect on others?

—Does the kind of punishment—fines or prison—make a difference.

—Does the swiftness and certainty of punishment, as opposed to dilatory enforcement and trial, make a difference?

The researchers will also examine cause and effect relationships, such as "If Norway has a lower rate of deaths related to driving, while drunk, we want to know why," Votey said.

Subtle psychological factors will also be examined, he said, for example, the suspected trait of the English to go to great lengths to hide drunkenness because it is considered bad manners.

Votey compared this view to that attributed to Finns that drunkenness is something to be rather proud of as a proof of masculinity.

The group will study whether these national traits really exist, or are merely folk ideas. And if they exist, whether they affect drunk driving statistics.

The three-year study will be funded for the first year by a $75,000 Ford Foundation grant, and more money is expected from other sources to conclude the study.

Insights on campus today

Are young people necessary anymore? I mean other than as consumers of motorcycles, extra-strong toothpastes, and Alice Cooper records. Sometimes, I think if the Pied Piper came through this area and somehow attracted all youth of elementary, secondary, and traditional college age to disappear with him overnight, it really wouldn't make any difference.

To be sure, there would be some sad parents and there would be plenty of educators out of work. However, the point I wish to make is that in most areas of the United States, or at least where the population bulges are, young people are unnecessary. They are not needed; they are not necessary; they are an economic liability. You would be hard-pressed to find another society or country where the same is true. In almost all other societies, there is a systematic way to let young people know they are important, needed, necessary, and "growing up". For example, in most primitive societies, the young at various stages of their growth and development are expected to perform basic functions essential to the survival of their society and have rituals honoring their growing young. Here, we say, "Go to school and prepare yourself to become an adult." As the schooling process gets longer and longer, adulthood gets farther and farther away.

You will recall that in a previous column I commented on compulsory school attendance laws and gave my opinion that there should not be compulsory requirements for young people to spend "seat hours" in school, but rather there should be compulsory requirements for education for our youth — the two are different.

Surprisingly, this phenomenon seems to have been on the increase during the past 20 to 30 years. Only now are we beginning to observe a glimmer of what we have been doing to our youth in the past. We can no longer afford to alienate our youth by isolating them from becoming a necessary and important part of the total community.

Assuming this role must be a part of the total educational process, we must quit fencing students in and include other than cognitive, role types of learning in our schools. We must discontinue prizing only our academically gifted college-bound students and relegating others to a form of second-class citizenship.

Quite frankly, the cause of this sad dilemma is an economic one and our tendency to worship the almighty dollar — also, our short-sighted approach to the long-range development of our most valuable human resource (as well as economic resource) — our youth.

Unless we face up to this, we can only expect increasing numbers of alienated disenchanted youth. My answer to the first question of this column is that our young people are more necessary now than they have ever been. Are we a total community organizing ourselves in such a way that they know it? Fencing them in schools with compulsory attendance, regardless of pupil need, is not the answer.

Offered night classes

The City of Philadelphia offered night school classes in 1850.

DENOUNCES MILITARY AID—Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., following her return from an Indonesia fact-finding mission along with seven other members of Congress, held an emotional news conference Monday at which she denounced the sending of $552 million in emergency military aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia. She said it was likely to produce only more killing in those embattled countries.

Judge says courts set moral standards

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — As far as Associate District Judge Gar Graham is concerned, policemen could better spend their time stopping killings at convenience stores than sitting in bars watching go-go girls.

On that basis, Graham dismissed the a charge of indecent exposure police had lodged against Rhonda Sue Brewer, 19, on motion by the defendant's attorney, Frank Kirk. The case was to have been heard Monday.

Graham said it was a duty of the courts to establish the moral standards of the community, and chided police and prosecutors who he said were attempting to take that duty into their own hands.

"I would be offended as a citizen to think a policeman was sitting in a go-go joint drinking booze with taxpayers' dollars, and when he was getting ready to leave he arrests someone to justify his existence," Graham said.

SHOE MARKET? WHAT THE ☆$!!@ IS A SHOE MARKET?

Now ... that's a real problem for us. SHOE MARKET has been California's foremost self-service family shoe store for as long as our boss can remember. And yet ... there are just too many people who don't know who we are or what we can do for them. If you're interested in providing yourself and your family with quality footwear at prices that will save you money, read on and discover what SHOE MARKET is all about!

SHOE MARKET is sort of like a supermarket of shoes. You can pick and choose your purchases at your own pace and you won't be bothered by a high-pressure salesman (although our friendly personnel will gladly assist those who request help). This self-service enables us to save you money. Our wide selection of fashion and style is on open display so you can compare and shop wisely. We sell only first quality shoes that are sturdy and serviceable and will give you GUARANTEED SAVINGS for your hard-earned dollars. AND WE BELIEVE THAT OUR CUSTOMERS PAY LESS FOR THEIR SHOES AT SHOE MARKET than they would at any of our competitors any time. That means GUARANTEED SAVINGS every day of the week.

We can't remember exactly which retailing wizard said it — maybe Mr. Woolworth or Mr. Penney or Mr. Sears — but we agree with him that you can't sell your goods cheaper than everyone all the time. But we try. We are trying harder, and succeeding, at selling our quality shoes at prices lower than our competitors. As a matter of fact, if we ever discover a competitor is underselling us on an identical item with his everyday price, we mark down our shoes so that we retain our edge. We've always done this.

The reason we try harder to maintain our price advantage is pure self-interest. We're interested in making the most money possible for our company. We think we can do this by selling the same quality shoes as competitors for less — and thereby sell more shoes — and do more business — and make more total profit even though our mark up per pair is less. We strongly feel that by efficiently operating our 36 self-service SHOE MARKETS, we can save you money. And because we provide our customers with quality shoes at lower prices, they will not only buy from us now but will also return to us for their needs in the future. That means a sound and growing business for us.

We know we're succeeding because your business has been good and getting better. Yet, from the kinds of things we've been reading in the papers, business is supposed to be terrible. We think the reason for this apparent contradiction is that more people are becoming smart consumers and are looking for higher value ... and when they want to buy shoes, more are coming to SHOE MARKET because they are GUARANTEED to save money.

SHOE MARKET IS OBVIOUSLY NOT FOR EVERYONE. If you don't have to worry about how much you spend, if you don't mind being "sold" a pair of shoes by a salesman rather than making your own selection and paying $1 to $3 more per pair for the same shoe, if you don't really care about having a wide selection to choose from, then you probably won't be inclined to shop at SHOE MARKET.

BUT SHOE MARKET IS YOUR PLACE TO SHOP if the following list of SHOE MARKET GUARANTEES are important to you:
- LOWER PRICES for first quality shoes ($1 to $4 per pair less than at "sit down" stores.) In fact we're looking for customers from Leeds, Kinney, Gallenkamp, Thom McAn and Karls.
- EASY SELF SERVICE (no "pressure selling" no waiting)
- WIDE SELECTION of fashion and styles
- ONE STOP SHOPPING for all your family's shoes
- FRIENDLY, COURTEOUS PERSONNEL
- HONEST VALUE
- GUARANTEED SAVINGS

As we sat down to think about what we wanted to tell people, we kept coming back to these SHOE MARKET advantages. And the more we thought about the reasons for our success, the more we became convinced it was because we just plain try harder to run a quality self-service shoe store that saves people money. We try harder ... sort of a familiar phrase but it still hits us — WE TRY HARDER! — We're better because we try harder. — We're better — WE BE #1. That's it! We ARE #1.

But to give you an extra inducement to come in and see us, we're bringing you the special #1 BUYS shown in this ad. We've really slashed our every day low prices on those popular shoes so that you'll come in to see how we look. We're confident that you'll like what you see, and even though we won't make any net profit on your purchase of our #1 BUYS, you'll probably become a SHOE MARKET customer.

To make more of you SHOE MARKET customers, we're even willing to experiment for awhile. All you have to do is bring in their ad and if we have the same shoe, you can buy it from us at 10% less than their advertised price during the term of their ad.

Agency putting spotlight on lead paint poisoning

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — For years health officials across the nation have been concerned about the danger of lead paint poisoning to children.

The Allegheny County Health Department is the first local agency in the nation to do anything about the problem. It is conducting an experimental survey of 4,000 dwelling units in the Pittsburgh area to try to work out a solution.

Heading the survey is Robert T. Cambic, administrator of the health department's poison control department.

Cambic does not expect miracles. The National Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce has provided $163,000 to finance the survey.

"We selected 4,000 houses at random," Cambic said. "Thus fare we have examined 2,600 but we don't expect to complete our report until early summer."

Cambic said most of the danger of lead poisoning is in homes built before 1940.

"These dwellings are covered with layer on layer of highly leaded paint," Cambic said. "The older the houses, the worse the dangers. Houses built since World War II do not present this hazard because they are covered with lead free paint."

Many children eat bits of paint peeling from either the exterior or interior of the older houses, Cambic noted, endangering their health.

"If, indeed, a large number of children are being poisoned by eating lead-based paint then something must be done," he said. "But it is difficult to determine how many houses were painted with the lead based variety."

"We hope the survey will give us a better picture of the lead paint problem in America's large urban areas. We aim to determine how to remove the lead paint in order to make the environment safe for children."

Cambic and his researchers, who have completed 65 per cent of the survey, have come up with a theory that requires more study.

"There are children who have never eaten lead paint peelings, yet they could have more lead in their bodies than is considered healthy," he said. "We think it is possible this lead comes from auto exhaust pipes or lead paint peeling from bridges and buildings.

"In each gallon of leaded gasoline there are two grams of lead. Blown out of the exhaust pipe, this mixes with the dirt and dust in the air."

Dr. Richard Moriarty, a pediatrician who is director of the Pittsburgh Poison Center at Children's Hospital, said many children have a craving for nonfood materials. It is called pica and is common.

"There is one theory that these kids lack something in their system and are looking for it," he said. Another cause of pica also could be emotional.

"They have some emotional problem and find eating is satisfying. Perhaps they have some emotional problem at home and resort to eating nonfoods."

Cambic said another purpose of the survey is to provide information to other areas planning to make studies.

He said Pittsburgh was chosen to conduct the experimental survey because the county health department has been interested in the hazards and sought federal funds.

Despite the dangers of lead paint, there have been no reports of death resulting from this hazard, according to the health department.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Although the beaver is an air breather, it is adapted to an amphibious life, The World Almanac reports. Its oversized liver and large lungs enable it to hold its breath for as long as 15 minutes. Its ears and nose are valvular and can be shut off at will. A transparent membrane protects its eyes when it dives. Also, its mouth is constructed so that fur flaps close behind its front incisors to facilitate wood chewing underwater.

PILOTS ASK AIRPORT SECURITY

VIENNA (UPI) -Airline pilots from 65 countries are demanding better airport security in many parts of the world to ensure safety for their passengers, James O'Grady, the president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots said Tuesday.

"We can never obtain 100 per cent safety but we demand that all airports live up to necessary security requirements," O'Grady told a news conference.

He said the demand will be discussed at the 30th annual IFALPA conference opening here Today with 250 delegates representing 55,000 airline pilots. The conference will review the problems of hijacking, sabotage, accident prevention and airport security.

"There is an astonishing lack of security at airports in many parts of the world," O'Grady said. "Especially in Africa and some parts of the Far East."

O'Grady said the IFALPA "will expose countries and airports not living up to necessary requirements.

"We will list them, mentioning their deficiences," he said.

O'Grady said the main purpose of the one week IFALPA conference was to "discuss all problems affecting pilots, airlines and passengers."

"We have established a system whereby we can measure the security status at various airports," O'Grady said. "Airports with a low grading will be exposed."

O'Grady said pilots are expected by IFALPA to refuse to fly if security at airports is inadequate.

"But we are more interested in improving security than refusing to fly," he said.

O'Grady said the number of hijacking attempts on airplanes has dropped from 82 in 1969 to 18 in 1974.

"But there is still a strong need for improvement in security," he said. "We will not be satisfied until all countries have signed the international conventions which require ratifying countries to make hijacking punishable as a serious crime and an extraditable offence.

"A total of 50 countries have still to ratify the Montreal convention of 1971 on unlawful acts against safety of civil aviation," he said.

Bike violators get sentence: police 'school'

On Saturday mornings an average of 18 to 25 bikers in La Verne, under the age of 16, are attending a bicycle safety class under the direction of the La Verne Police Department.

Each biker has been cited by the police for breaking the law. His or her parents have received a letter explaining the department's bicycle safety program begun in January to avert injuries. If the young person fails to show up for the class or continues to flout the law he will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

Lt. Wesley Stearns commented that is hard to tell yet how effective the program is, but at least when bikers see the "black and white cars around they seem to be more careful."

Those above 16 who receive citations are sent through the regular traffic courts.

Anyone who wishes to know more about the traffic rules for bikes may come to the 10 a.m. Saturday classes also. Officer Kenneth Swank and several Explorer Scouts show a film produced by the Automobile Club. A question and answer period follows, then there is an inspection of the bikes.

"So far," says Stearns, "the reaction of parents has been favorable to the safety program."

Most coal produced

Although West Virginia and Kentucky are regarded as the chief coal producing states, Pennsylvania produced the most coal ever in a single year —179 million tons in 1918.

L.V. okays tennis job

All-Pro Tennis Court Builders of Alhambra submitted the low bid to construct two lighted tennis courts at Las Flores Park in La Verne. The bid was $35,490.

The City Council agreed to go accept the bid after City Manager, George Caswell reported that he had received good reports about the firm's work.

The timetable for the construction, says Parks and Recreation Director, Ray Kaldenbach, will have the courts ready for use in early summer.

The area for the courts has been cleared of children's play equipment. It was moved north of the swimming pool. Two large concrete pipe sections were donated to the primary school and have been installed on its grounds.

Rubbings from casket one of auction items

Two "rubbings" taken from 19th Century caskets and a valuable 15th Century Italian sofa will be available at a silent auction March 14 sponsored by the Pasadena Auxiliary of Boys Republic at the Pasadena Center Exhibition Hall.

The rare items will be displayed and sold as part of an invitational champagne preview, held on the eve of the auxiliary's semi-annual rummage sale, a benefit scheduled March 15 at the exhibition hall.

The rubbings were donated by Virgil White's Wholesale Antiques in Pasadena, and the sofa was given by a friend of Boys Republic and appraised at $2,700.

The black-tie champagne preview is the first such event held in connection with the rummage sale, billed as the world's largest. Business, political and entertainment notables are expected to attend.

Proceeds from the preview and rummage sale will go to benefit Boys Republic in Chino, the 87-year-old home and school for troubled boys.

Schools, scouts pile it up for L.V. recycling project

Recycling in La Verne continues to be a project of several groups. Harold Royer, City Beautiful Committee recycling chairman, reported that during the past three months he and his committe handled 15,345 pounds of glass turned in at the city center.

Inman Conety, president of the La Verne Historical Society, reported that he had handled 21,996 pounds of newsprint for which he receives a premium price for careful handling. This means, he says, the elimination of all magazines, colored paper or cardboard from the paper turned in at the recycling center.

He said that it would help if people would include only black and white newspapers when they make donations to the center.

The Eco-Action Club of La Verne College turned in 175 pounds of aluminum.

Collections by students at La Verne Heights School amounted to 300 pounds of glass, 15,100 pounds of newsprint and 197 pounds of aluminum. Ramona Intermediate School turned in 1,200 pounds of aluminum.

Girl Scout Troop 83 of Grace Miller School handled 75 pounds of glass, 400 pounds of newsprint and 2 pounds of aluminum.

Boy Scout Troop 411 turned in 14,700 pounds of paper.

Environmental interest at Ramona Intermediate School has resulted in an offer by students in the classes of Bob Romero to help do clean-up work around town on Saturdays. The City Beautiful Committee welcomed the offer and will contact Romero about some trashy areas, two of which are the corner of Bonita and Damien and the corner of Bonita and San Dimas Canyon Road.

Habe Das will travel

A haberdasher is basically a dealer in accessories — shirts, ties, socks. Peddlers in Germany would cry their wares by calling "Habe das" — in English — "I have that." When the sellers settled in stores they kept their traveling name — haberdasher.

Briefing for citizens

We T.I.P. plans seminar

We Turn in Pushers, Inc. (We T.I.P.), headquartered in Pomona, will conduct its third annual seminar April 11 through 13 aboard the Queen Mary in Long Beach, Bill Brownell, We T.I.P. state director, has announced.

We T.I.P. a nonprofit, community-based organization dedicated to reducing drug trafficking by supplying local police departments with information on suspected drug pushers through anonymous informants, is celebrating its third year of operation.

Brownell said the theme for this year's seminar is "United in Service." The seminar will provide interested citizens and representatives from service organizations supporting the We T.I.P. effort an insight into the purpose and operations of the organization.

Brownell said We T.I.P. in the last three years has aided local law enforcement agencies throughout California in the arrest and conviction of 445 persons suspected of being drug pushers, and in the confiscation of nearly $13 million in illegal drugs. Brownell said only recently We T.I.P. was informed by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office in Lennox that We T.I.P. information aided it in the arrest of seven persons that dried up the illegal LSD supply from Santa Monica to San Pedro. The deputies on the case reported confiscating 3,300,000 "hits" of LSD with a street value of nearly $6 million.

Persons interested in attending the We T.I.P. Seminar may call 714-623-1405 for information.

Cloak of mystery shorn from CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Harry S. Truman said in his memoirs that if the Central Intelligence Agency had existed while Japan's ruling warlords were plotting their conquests, the United States might not have suffered the surprise attack at Pearl Harbor.

When Truman asked Congress to create the CIA in 1947, he probably had little vision of the agency that would grow — secretly and virtually unsupervised —into a political espionage apparatus of global proportions and influence.

It would become an agency of faceless men behind unmarked doors who would assist attempts to overthrow no less than eight foreign governments, launch spy satellites, get embroiled in the Watergate scandal and finally face allegations they spied illegally on their fellow Americans.

Although there have been dramatic disclosures about some of the CIA's clandestine activities in recent years, its vast operations have never been known at any time in the past 27 years beyond a small, close circle of highly trusted officials in Washington.

Its spending, which some congressional experts believe amounts to more than $1 billion a year, is hidden in hundreds of unidentified items in the federal budget, mostly under Defense Department appropriations.

The size of its staff is a closely guarded secret, although it is said that an enterprising reporter once got an exact but never confirmed figure from the Soviet embassy.

Signs were erected recently along the George Washington Parkway pointing the way to the sprawling CIA headquarters, surrounded by woods about 10 miles outside Washington at Langley, Va. Most people already knew where it was, but no one really knows what goes on inside.

The CIA was established by the National Security Act of 1947 as successor to the Office of Strategic Services, the nation's World War II espionage and intelligence-gathering agency.

Its charter gives the CIA broad powers to engage in intelligence collection, coordination and analysis. There is a ban on "internal security functions," or domestic spying, but the prohibition is modified a few sentences later to give the director authority for "protecting intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized disclosure."

The CIA's role was enhanced in the 1950s, when cold war diplomacy, the rise of nuclear weaponry and U.S. perception of the threat of Soviet communist expansion helped make international intelligence gathering a vital element in American foreign policy.

Much of the CIA's power springs from its responsibility not only for gathering intelligence overseas but for assembling data from all nine government intelligence agencies, including the FBI, the Pentagon, the Treasury Department and the now-dissolved Atomic Energy Commission, and reporting to the President through the National Security Council.

The nation's overall intelligence operations are carried out by the Director of Central Intelligence, who also serves as CIA director.

While the CIA's budget may be only $1 billion, sources in Congress have estimated the toral U.S. intelligence budget is anywhere from $6 billion to $15 billion a year. They put CIA manpower at 18,000 employes, with more than 200,000 persons employed by all the intelligence agencies.

Of the CIA's four divisions — intelligence, operations, science and technology, and support — intelligence is the largest and most important. It analyzes all incoming data and assembles the final product, known in spy world jargon as "threat assessments" and "intelligence evaluations."

Contrary to the spy thriller image, the work of the intelligence unit is mostly dull, like clipping newspapers and other easily available materials. It is staffed by hundreds of computer specialists and intelligence analysts.

Probably the most expensive CIA operation is launching and maintaining the network of electronic surveillance satellites that take photographs and radio data from around the earth.

Operations is the cloak and dagger section, charged with covert CIA operations around the world. Besides spying in the traditional sense, its work includes extensive political operations, from psychological warfare to obtaining a urinalysis of the ailing leader of a strategic foreign country.

Among the covert CIA activities that have been publicly disclosed:

—Two CIA agents were captured in mainland China when their plane was shot down in 1952. They were attempting to drop supplies to teams of Chinese agents they had helped organize.

—In 1953, the CIA organized and directed the coup that overthrew Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, who had tried to nationalize the British-controlled oil industry.

In 1954 the agency helped overthrow Communist-dominated President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman of Guatemala. In 1963 CIA agents worked closely with the South Vietnamese generals who killed President Ngo Dinh Diem. Last year they helped "destabilize" the government of Salvadore Allende of Chile.

—The CIA directed, trained, armed and help launch a small group of Cuban exiles seeking to overthrow Fidel Castro in the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion.

—A U2 spy plane flown by CIA pilot Francis Gary Powers was shot down by a Soviet missile in 1960.

Controversy over domestic CIA activities is not new.

Eight years ago it was disclosed that the CIA subsidized the National Student Association by infiltrating the group's leadership and laundering funds through foundations, businesses, labor groups, churches and cultural organizations. The activity might have been legally justified under the CIA's authority to determine whether foreign agents were behind other, militant U.S. organizations.

Last year the CIA acknowledged it had trained members of about a dozen U.S. city police departments in handling explosives, detecting wiretaps and organizing intelligence files as part of a program financed by the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The present CIA controversy grew out of the agency's involvement in the Watergate scandals. Senate investigators discovered that the CIA had supplied one of its old agents, E. Howard Hunt, with a disguise and spying materials used to interview ITT lobbyist Dita Beard and take part in the Ellsberg break-in.

Hunt and the Cuban-Americans involved in the Watergate break-in June 17, 1972, all had CIA backgrounds and one, Eugenio Martinez, was still on the agency payroll.

"The agency gathers more information than we can process," a former CIA employe was quoted as saying in a recent study by the MIT Center for International Studies.

"Shredders and incinerators at CIA headquarters can destroy four tons of paper per day, but that isn't nearly enough to cope with the voluminous amount of material that is thrown away each day," he said.

TEMPIO PAUSANIA, Sardinia (UPI) — Shepherd Vincenzo Corrado, who has lived alone since he immigrated from Sicily 25 years ago says he is in good health, but he has decided to make arrangements just in case.

Garey advances to CIF semifinals

Vikings top Beverly Hills

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

In a real gun battle at Citrus College Tuesday night, Garey High unveiled its deadly weapon again and moved into the semifinals of the CIF 3-A basketball playoffs.

The victim this time was Beverly Hills High, succumbing to the Vikings' "Fourth Quarter Flurry."

Outscoring the visiting Normans 11-0 within a two minute span during the fourth period, the Vikings emerged with a 90-78 victory in the quarter-final confrontation.

After holding a nine-point lead going into the final quarter of action, Garey saw its gap sliced to only one point, 75-74, with four minutes to play.

Then came the famous flurry.

Sixth-man Kent Jordan got it going with a field goal, followed by another from forward Gary Carpenter at the 3:45 mark. Forcing Beverly Hills into hurring some of its shots, the Vikings were able to control the backboards and then slow down the pace.

Free throws by forward Delbert McDonald (two), Carpenter (two) and Jordan (one) upped the Vikings' lead to 10, 87-74, with two minutes to play . . . and it appeared all over then.

After the game, Garey head coach Mike Wells reflected on the contest and looked ahead to his next opponent. "I hope it's Los Altos," he admitted. "But I think Camarillo will blow them off."

However, Camarillo didn't. In fact, Los Altos won the right to face Garey in the semifinals Friday night by knocking off Wells' predicted winner, 55-52.

Both teams Tuesday night at Citrus put on a tremendous display of basketball, with Garey facing possibly the best individual player of the season.

Beverly Hills forward Steve Craig did everything but sell popcorn to the Normans' rooting section at halftime. The stocky All-CIF receiver from football scored 31 points — mostly from the outside — and grabbed five rebounds. His explosiveness enabled him to drive through the lanes unmolested for layups on occasions.

In fact, it was Craig who kept the Vikings from running away earlier than they did.

The 6-2 sharpshooter hit 9 of 11 free throws in the second quarter to pull the Normans from a 10-point deficit, leaving them tied with the San Antonio League champions at halftime, 44-44.

Then he scored 10 of the team's 18 points in the third quarter to keep B.H. in the game.

But the Vikings had plenty to counter Craig's barrage.

Garey, behind the outside shooting of guards Billy Evans (eight points) and Sonny Baldez (six points) and the inside work of David Larry (seven points), hit 13 of 18 shots from the field in the first quarter to grab a 27-18 advantage.

The Vikings cooled off a little in the second period due to some foul trouble, but still managed to finish the first 16 minutes of playing shooting 64.5 per cent (20 for 31).

Foul trouble kept Evans and McDonald from doing extensive damage to the Beverly Hills defense, but the others picked up the slack. Larry had his second-best game offensively, scoring 17 points, while Jordan came off the bench to add another 17.

Carpenter, playing very consistently the entire night, finished up with 16 points. McDonald and Evans, although seeing a lot of bench action, still managed to dump in 14 points each. Baldez, cooling off the fourth quarter, ended up with 12 markers.

Larry concluded the night at the game's leading board man, pulling in 12 (five in the first quarter).

Craig, however, wasn't a one-man show for Beverly Hills. He got a lot of scoring support from guard Brad Turrell and some belliant work from forward Miller Johnson.

Turrell, also hitting most of his shots from the outside, finished up with 21 points. Johnson only scored 12, but snagged 11 boards.

Garey finished the night shooting 58.5 per cent from the floor (38 of 65), while Beverly Hills hit on 45.6 per cent from the field (31 of 68).

Garey will compete in the semifinals of the post-season tournament for the first time in its history, having been eliminated from the tourney in the quarterfinals twice before.

Los Altos will be host of the affair, although a site has not yet been determined.

TWO THE HARD WAY

Garey High's Sonny Baldez (30) flies over a fallen Beverly Hills player enroute to the bucket during Tuesday night's CIF quarterfinal game at Citrus. Garey won, 90-78.

Two points behind Montreal

Pulford unhappy about Kings' win

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Kings have again pulled within two points of NHL Division 3 leader Montreal and remained only once beaten in their last 11 games.

But Coach Bob Pulford was still not completely happy with the second-place Kings' 7-4 victory over the Kansas City Scouts Tuesday night.

"We've given up 13 goals in our last three games," Pulford said. "We're playing too wide open. We'll have to tighten up a little bit with the Islanders and Chicago coming in. We weren't really sharp tonight."

The Kings, all season long, have had one of the league's stingiest defenses, but Kansas City—which has managed to win only 14 games in its first year—was able to score four goals against Rogie Vachon.

Los Angeles won easily, though, thanks to Juha Widing's second hat trick this season. He became the first player in Kings history to go over the 300-point plateau.

"I didn't know I had a chance to go over the 300-point mark," said the quiet Widing, who now has 119 goals and 182 assists. "I get a bigger satisfaction about the team winning than I do about individual records."

Terry Harper, the Kings' captain, also got a "hat trick" of sorts. Never very prominent in scoring goals, he collected his third of the season in the last period and the Forum crowd obliged by showering the ice with hats.

"That was one of the greatest thrills of my career," said Harper, whose season career-high is four goals. "I really had to laugh when I saw all those hats coming out on the ice."

The Scouts, in the cellar of Division 2, finally ended a slump in which the team went scoreless for 133 minutes and 24 seconds. Norm Dube scored at 4:01 of the first period, the first by Kansas City against the Kings this season.

"I was hoping for a fire," Coach Bep Guidolin said about his feelings when the Scouts took an early 2-0 lead. Kansas City was coming off two shutout losses.

Los Angeles has its next four games at home before going on the road to confront Montreal and Pulford remains confident.

"I think we have a good chance of winning both the division and conference titles," he said.

Griffith puts his manager on the spot

By United Press International

Spring training is barely a week old, and already there's a manager under the gun.

Frank Quilici, who barely survived the 1974 season when the Minnesota Twins rallied to finish third in the AL West, got the bad news Tuesday.

His boss, owner Calvin Griffith, said the Twins were "bona fide contenders" for the pennant.

"I don't know of any other team that has the talent and opportunity to go as far as this club," Griffith said.

Pennant talk like that is cheap in the spring. To listen to Griffith, you'd think the Twins had acquired Catfish Hunter or Lee May or Bobby Bonds or Billy Williams or one of the other $100,000 studs playing for new teams in the AL this season.

But the only new faces on the Minnesota roster this spring belong to Darrell Ford and Dennis Myers, guys who labored in the minors last season and are not expected to stand the league on its ear.

Still Griffith saw enough to say, "This is the best group we've had in spring training in a long while." Now it's up to Quilici, the major leagues' youngest manager, to produce.

The second youngest manager in the big leagues, Frank Robinson, also heard something he did not want to hear on Tuesday. The Indians' rookie player-manager tried to change his pitching staff's conditioning program, but backed down in the face of a protest led by Gaylord Perry.

Perry, who announced last fall he wanted to make $1 more than Robinson—but didn't get it —represented the pitching staff at a meeting after Robinson replaced wind sprints with an endurance run.

"I made some suggestions and Frank made some suggestions, and I'm certain now that everything will be just fine," Perry said.

"I just want to get the work done and I want everyone happy, too," said Robinson, who announced he would go back to the sprints in his conditioning program because the pitchers felt they were better.

"I want the guys to speak up," Robinson added. "I want to hear their opinion on things. The door to my office swings both ways. I'm new at running a ballclub and I'm open to suggestions."

The holdout rolls were slightly reduced when the Orioles signed outfielder Don Baylor and the Astros signed second baseman Rob Andrews.

The Los Angeles Dodgers gave a spring training tryout invitation to Juan Marichal. Marichal, now out of work after being released by the Red Sox, was suspended 10 years ago after hitting Dodgers' catcher John Roseboro on the head with a bat. Roseboro is now a California coach.

Only Jazz can cheer Lakers

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers meet the New Orleans Jazz tonight in a battle between the two teams with the worst records in the NBA.

The Lakers suffered their 42nd loss Tuesday night to Atlanta 109-97 despite Gail Goodrich and Cazzie Russell's 26 points each. Los Angeles has only won 22 games this year.

Only New Orleans, at 15-48, has more defeats in the NBA than the Lakers.

Both are at the bottom of their respective divisions, Los Angeles in the Pacific and New Orleans in the Central.

Rutherford has high hopes

When you win the Indianapolis and Pocono 500s in one year, it's hard to be disappointed.

That's exactly the way Texan Johnny Rutherford said, "but we didn't win the national championship and that was a bitter pill to swallow. When you win two of the three 500s, you should win everything, right? But we didn't."

Rutherford, who will celebrate his 37th birthday next week, wasn't talking just to be talking either. He wanted the U.S. Auto Club championship car driving crown which was captured by Bobby Unser.

"You bet we wanted it," the Fort Worth veteran said. "But Bobby was more steady than we were and that was the secret."

In the California 500 a year ago, Rutherford placed just 27th after going out on the 49th lap with piston problems. He went on to win $383,925 to $299,175 for Unser, who captured the 1974 Ontario event, and was selected as Driver of the Year by the American Auto Race Writers and Broadcaster's Association.

The popular Rutherford will start in the middle of the second row—No. 5 in the 33-car field —when the 1975 championship car slate gets underway with the sixth annual Cal 500 Sunday at Ontario Motor Speedway.

In last Saturday's qualifying, he went 192.864 miles an hour in his brand new McLaren-Offy while fellow Texan A. J. Foyt won the pole at 196.549 m.p.h.

"We're going to try to repeat everything we did last year plus win here and win the national championship," said Rutherford, who went from 1965 to 1973 without a championship car triumph.

"But that's not an easy order. It took 11 years to win Indianapolis."

His Indianapolis victory capped a career that started in Dallas, Tex., in 1959 and included a jarring sprint car crash at Rossburg, Ohio, in 1966 which left him with two broken arms.

"It's impossible for me to cite all the benefits from winning Indy," he said. "It hasn't changed my lifestyle or anything but it sure made everything over all these years worthwhile."

According to Rutherford, his success last year was only a matter of time after he joined the McLaren team.

He won four championship car events in 1974 after ending his long victory drought in spectacular fashion in '73 with two wins in three weeks.

"We started producing after we got our act together," he noted. "Your first year with a new team is always an orientation thing.

"I think now we have an excellent chance in this race (the Cal 500). I can't predict we're going to win it but I have tremendous equipment and you can't win without that.

"I honestly believe this car can be better than last year's."

Of Foyt, the favorite here, Rutherford remarked, "He's always tough and he's good again this year. I rate him as probably the greatest race driver the U.S. has ever produced."

The USAC vet also has NASCAR ambitions this year. He plans to run in eight to 10 stock car events. Plus he plans to run the entire Formula 5000 schedule.

"I'd like to diversify," he said. "I don't have any ambitions of going to Europe to do Formula One racing but I do hope to do real well in stock car racing this year."

Dodgers turn cheek by inviting Marichal

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers have turned the other cheek by inviting their former public enemy No. 1, Juan Marichal, to a spring training tryout.

Dodger officials say there is some chance the 37-year-old Dominican dandy, who was made a free agent by the Boston Red Sox last year, will accept the comeback challenge, although a chronic back ailment has plagued him most of his career.

Marichal became the most hated of all Dodger opponents while pitching for the San Francisco Giants. He especially stirred the wrath of Dodger players and fans when he clubbed catcher John Roseboro over the head with his bat at Candlestick Park in 1965.

Marichal, who claimed Roseboro threw too close to his head while returning a ball to Sandy Koufax on the mound, was suspended for his actions. Roseboro filed a $1 million suit but later settled out of court, reportedly for $10,000.

The high-kicking Marichal has since expressed regret over the incident and has indicated he would like to try out with a team near his home in San Francisco. He included the Dodgers as one of the clubs.

Helping pave the way for Marichal is his Dominican Republic buddy, Manny Mota, one of the most popular Dodgers of all time.

Angels face weight fines from skipper

HOLTVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — The weighing starts today for the California Angels and it's going to cost the players $100 for every pound they're overweight.

Manager Dick Williams isn't expecting to be taking in much of a collection, though.

"I don't anticipate any weight problems," he said. "They're all right there."

Williams assigned each player a maximum reporting weight this spring and $100 will be assessed for each pound over the limit.

Highlighting the Angels' 2½ hour workout Tuesday was a "one-eyed cat" game in which two teams of pitchers took turns batting and fielding, while using only second base and home as bases.

Nolan Ryan's team beat Bill Singer's squad in the five-inning contest, 5-3.

Ryan drove in three RBIs and hit an inside-the-park home run to lead his team with Dick Lange adding three hits and four RBIs. For Singer's team, Chuck Hockenberry hit a two-run homer.

The only absentee from camp was catcher Ellie Rodriquez, who hasn't been heard from. He was supposed to report last Saturday.

Mountie star voted Player of Year

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

Optimistic outlooks for next year were the theme of the basketball coaches at the final luncheon of the season Tuesday afternoon at The Castaway Restaurant.

Before wrapping it up for the season, the coaches and writers selected George Schader, the outstanding Mt. San Antonio College star, the Player of the Year in the area.

Schader, a sophomore from Covina High, averaged 24 points and nine rebounds a game in leading MSAC to a 24-4 season record.

MSAC also earned the weekly honor as guard Jeff Cox was voted the Player of the Week for his part in the Mounties' 72-58 victory over Santa Ana in the season finale. Foothill Beverage sponsors the collegiate awards.

Garey High's David Larry, a 6-6 center, was honored as the High School Player of the Week for his part in leading the Vikings to two victories in the CIF 3-A playoffs last week. Pomona Elks Lodge 789 sponsors the prep awards.

A special guest at the luncheon was Tom Pokorski of MSAC, who was selected the Player of the Week last week. Pokorski will be reporting to the Boston Red Sox spring camp next week in Florida.

When asked how difficult it is to play both professional baseball and junior college basketball, Pokorski said, "I like both sports a lot and I feel I have had a lot of fun. I learned a lot on how to work hard this season at MSAC."

Pokorski is a product of Covina's Nortview High. He served as a valuable sixth man for the Mounties this season.

"At first, it was kind of tough coming off the bench," he said, "but the five starters were doing such a good job that I didn't mind. I'm going for one of the five spots next year but the coach has the final say."

Quoting the coaches:

GENE VICTOR, MSAC: "Pokorski played very well for us down the stretch. I am pleased to have him back. Cox did a great job for us against Santa Ana in scoring 16 points plus six assists and a great defensive job. Of our top eight players, six are freshmen."

NEIL EDWARDS, Citrus: "We're 12-16 for the year and 6-9 in Mission Conference play entering our final game at Palomar. The nicest thing for us is getting Roland Allbright back for another season. He is just learning how to play basketball. We'll have five freshmen back next year and we hope to pick up some good high school players."

DON HOGAN, Cal Poly: "We finished second in our league with a 5-3 record, 13-12 overall. The point I want to stress about the season is the way our players have grown. The team remained positive until the end and showed a lot of poise and class. This team made me very proud. We're looking forward to an excellent season next year. We lost two seniors in Bill Bunker and Dick Gross."

ART BIAS, La Verne: "We feel good about the season. We started out by making mistakes but we kept getting better. Our defense improved by 14 points from the beginning of the season until the end. If we can improve the offense 10 points next year, we should be in good shape. We'll have the nucleus of a good team coming back. We need a big man to get rebounds for us but I guess everybody wants a big man. We'll open next season with a tournament at our gym with Cal Poly, Cal Lutheran and Cal State Dominguez Hills."

DON LAWRENCE, Azusa Pacific assistant: "We lost our final game of the year last week to Point Loma. Lack on concentration has been our big problem all year. Recruiting looks good for next year. It was the first losing season for Cliff Hamlow in 13 years but he handled it very well. We just didn't have the leadership we needed on the floor."

LES NAGLER, Pomona-Pitzer: "I am very pleased with our team this season. We had three sophomores in the starting lineup and I hope they will all come back. It has been a good group which has been eager to work."

DAVE WELLS, Claremont-Mudd: "Johnny Daniels and Dave Willhite played well for us in our final game against Whittier. We're looking forward to a good season next year with four sophomores and one freshman coming back. I learned a lot of things this season. The biggest thing for a new coach is learning how to handle personnel. It comes with maturity."

Mounties remain red hot

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

Rich Yaklin carried a .152 batting average into Mt. San Antonio College's South Coast Conference baseball opener with Fullerton Tuesday afternoon at MSAC.

To show how meaningless non-conference statistics can be, Yaklin, an ex-GI who is the Mountie catcher this season, won the game for his team with a triple to right-center field that drove in two runs and broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh inning.

The Mounties held on to win it 4-2 after Fullerton put the tying runs on base in the ninth inning and left them stranded.

So, coach Art Mazmanian's team upped their record for the year to 11-2 — 11 in a row — and took a step towards the South Coast title which has belonged to Cerritos for three years. With the loss, Fullerton is 11-4 overall.

The defending champs dropped a 2-1 decision to San Diego Mesa and Orange Coast beat Santa Ana 3-1 in other South Coast openers Tuesday.

In the Mission Conference meanwhile, Citrus claimed its third conference win in four outings with an 8-4 win at San Bernardino and Chaffey dropped its third game in four, 4-3, to Southwestern. The Panthers are 9-4-1 overall.

Yaklin wasn't the only timely hitter for the Mounties. Binky Benton and Gary Adair doubled and tripled back-to-back in the first inning to give MSAC a 1-0 lead.

Benton was in the act again in the Mountie fifth, tying the score at 2-2 with a single to right field that scored Marty Shepherd who had walked.

Fullerton scored twice in the fifth. MSAC starter Bobby Chaulk gave up three singles in a row with two outs and Mike Holato produced the fourth base hit to drive Lee Wilcox and Ron Johnson home.

Chaulk went 7 1-3 innings before he was retired by husky righthander Terry Jacob who was credited with the win. Chaulk (3-1) fanned seven, walked none, but allowed nine hits. Jacob issued no walks, struck out one and gave up a pair of singles in the ninth before retiring the side on a couple of routine infield plays.

The win over San Bernardino pushed Citrus' season record to 12-3 and was accomplished as the Owls got some help from five Indian errors and a two-run fourth inning.

Outfielder Jim McCadden led the offensive with three hits in five trips to the plate, including a double. Tim Eppard drilled a pair of two-baggers and Joe Sansom singled and doubled in three at bats.

Chaffey's Rod Wiegand had a big day despite the loss for the Panthers. Wiegand singled twice, drove in a run and stole four bases. Dennis Hawkins and Steve Jones also had doubles for the slumping Panthers.

All three junior college teams return to action Thursday in conference games on the road. MSAC visits Orange Coast in Costa Mesa. Citrus travels to Escordido to face Palomar and Chaffey plays Saddleback in Mission Viejo. All three games are scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m.

Claremont reaches soccer semis

Wolves win again

By GRAHAM CROW
P-B Correspondent

SAN GABRIEL — The Claremont High soccer team is now one game away from participating in the CIF finals for the third consecutive year.

That was determined Tuesday afternoon when the Wolfpack scored their final straight shutout of the playoffs, blanking host San Gabriel 2-0.

All the scoring came in the first half of the gloomy afternoon within a span of less than one minute.

After a less than artistic opening five minutes, Claremont shook off its playoff jitters and really played fine ball. Who said so? None other than coach Otto Rieger.

"The way we played in the first half after the first five minutes is the way champions play," commented the personable Claremont leader.

"Harvey McCaulay started hustling for us at midfield and the balls seemed to start going our way."

Jim Van Zee got the Wolfpack the lead midway through the opening half. Setting up a free kick from the left, Van Zee's boot glanced off a confused looking San Gabriel goalie and rolled into the net.

The excited Claremont 11 then really put it to the No. 7 rated Matadors and scored less than one minute later.

Left wing Mark Kauffman got the second goal after Kevin Oss made a fine header on John Hawes' throw in.

"The throw in and free kick are two things we've really worked on this week," said a pleased Rieger afterwards. "This was really a great job by the whole team.

Claremont goalie Casey Roberts recorded his third shutout of the playoffs and has not allowed a goal in his last eight games. Roberts only made one difficult save during the afternoon but that was a beauty midway through the final period.

Center fullback Gesner DoCarmo and Jerry Van Zee were outstanding on defense, making life a lot easier for Roberts.

Things aren't going to get much easier for Claremont however, from here on out.

In the semifinals Friday, the Wolfpack will face defending CIF champion South Torrance which downed Chino, 4-1. South is rated No. 2 with a 22-3-1 record while Claremont, the third rated team, boasts a fine 20-2-2 mark.

Cowboys fall in CIF soccer quarterfinals

By MIKE BROSSART
PP-B Correspondent

Chino High's soccer season came to an end Tuesday night when the Cowboys were upended, 4-1, by the second-ranked South Torrance Spartans at Chino Memorial Stadium.

It was only the second loss of the year for the Cowboys, who were ranked 16th in the CIF.

"We played a fine team," said Chino coach Buddy Ayala. "It just wasn't our night."

Chino jumped off to a 1-0 lead with 13:25 gone in the first half on an unassisted goal by foward Melchos Lopez. Lopez' score was only the second shot on goal of the game for the home team.

In spite of dominating the game with its aggressive offense, South Torrance could not penetrate the Chino goal until Spartan forward Bret Lee scored on an assist from halfback Steve Meade at 26:40.

Before Lee's goal, the Spartans had made 11 unsuccessful shots on goals, seven of which had been turned back by Cowboy golaie Andy Kochever.

But South Torrance scored again on its very next shot at goal—though it came about five minutes later.

It was Lee who did the damage again, this time with an assist from forward Robert Beach.

The first half ended with the visitors ahead, 2-1. South Torrance took 17 shots on goal in the first period, while Chino managed just four. Kochever made 10 saves for the Cowboys in the half.

In the second half the Cowboys were shut out by two Spartan goalies, David Wyman and John McGregor.

Meanwhile South Torrance scored twice.

Spartan forward Robert Thalmann took a pass from forward Anthony Maggio and lined a shot past Kochever at 7:10, and Beach scored the game's final goal less than two minutes later with an assist from foward Ron Saldana.

The Cowboys finished the game with just seven shots on goal, while Torrance tried 26 times.

Chino, ruanerup in the SAL with a 9-1-4 mark, ended its seson with a 16-2-4 overall record.

Hacienda League track action gets underway Thursday afternoon, while four San Antonio League teams and one Montview club continue non-league competition.

Defending league champion San Dimas, figuring to repeat as Hacienda League titlist for the third straight year, will be the featured attraction in the league openers.

The Saints will be visiting Sierra Vista, while Walnut travels to Royal Oak, Bonita hosts Ontario, and Alta Loma takes a trip to Gladstone.

The four SAL teams slated to see action Thursday afternoon include Chino at Brea-Olinda, Ganesha at West Covina, Pomona at Eisenhower, and Upland at home against Chaffey.

In the Montview League, Rowland will visit Arroyo. All meets are scheduled to get underway at 3:15 p.m.

Some of the individuals to watch for in the San Dimas-Sierra Vista meet will be Saints Frank Diaz (mile), Kevin Kellogg (two mile), Shelly White (hurdles), Tony Atkinson (pole vault) and Colin Fenderson (high jump).

"This is the thinnest in top people we have been since we started at San Dimas," commented Saints track coach Jim George. "We have some young men with some ability and hopefully by the end of the season they will come along enough to be competitive in the CIF. We look for Ontario and Royal Oak to have strong track teams. Sierra Vista could have a successful team due to some strong juniors."

Prep baseball roundup

Salgado tosses no-hitter to highlight Nogales win

Sophomore Art Salgado, making his first start, hurled a no-hit shutout Tuesday afternoon to lift Nogales High to a 14-0 victory over host San Dimas in valley high school baseball action.

Salgado, who went five innings pitching a perfect game, gave up two walks and didn't allow a San Dimas runner past first base. He struck out five on the mound and also contributed three singles and a run batted in at the plate.

Sammy Perez was the big hitter for the Nobles, blasting two home runs and a single to drive in five runs.

Nogales is now 2-0 for the year, while San Dimas dropped to 2-2.

In other prep baseball action Tuesday, Damien remained unbeaten by knocking off St. John Bosco, 3-1. Montclair kept its undefeated season intact with a 6-5 win over Ontario, Alta Loma trimmed Pomona, 6-5, Rowland rallied to down Wilson of Hacienda Heights, 3-1, Chaffey tripped La Puente, 5-4, and Royal Oak nipped Baldwin Park, 5-4.

Damien pitcher Frank Pastore and Vince Garcia limited Bosco to just three hits and a run. Pastore went four innings and gave up one hit, while Garcia pitched the last three and allowed two safeties and the lone tally.

The Spartans are now 4-0 for the year and will host Edgewood Friday afternoon.

Kent Gurney and Brent Jetton got two hits each against Ontario to give Montclair its fourth win without a loss. Cavalier pitcher Steve Corbo left the game in the fifth inning after giving up only one hit.

Trailing 6-0, Ontario proceeded to rally with five runs in the last three innings — only to come up short.

Anthony Vasquez, fresh off the basketball court, slugged a home run and a double to drive in three runs for Alta Loma. Mike Forsyth homered and singled in Pomona's losing effort. The Red Devils are now 1-4 for the season.

Curt Johns tripled home two runs, and then Ray Etchebarren tripled home Johns in the top of the seventh to lead Rowland to its come-from-behind win over Wilson. The Raiders are now 3-1 for the year.

Joe Bruno scored following his single, a Jay Rogina sacrifice, and a La Puente throwing error to give Chaffey the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning to upend the Warriors.

Bonita suffers third straight baseball loss

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Correspondent

With three games under their belts, Bonita High's baseball team is hurriedly trying to iron out the creases of a slow beginning caused by graduation, minor injuries and basketball players just reporting for duty.

Covina High let off some steam and coach Dick Salomon's Bearcats were flattened for the third straight time Tuesday afternoon as the Colts exploded for 11 runs in the fifth inning en route to an 18-8 rout on the Bonita diamond.

The Colts (2-2) sent 15 men to the plate in the fifth with key blows supplied by Del Webster, Rich Roth and Terry Snyder. Roth blasted a three-run double (he also had a two-run triple in the seventh) while Webster and Snyder each had two-run doubles. Covina was also helped by Mike Harms' two-run homer in the seventh.

Three hits and three errors staked the Colts to three runs but Matt Covington singled home runs in the first and third to keep Bonita close, 3-2. The Cats' tied the game in the fourth on Jerry Osborn's RBI single.

Bonita scored five runs in the final two frames as Bill Bumstead drove in a sixth inning marker while an error on the hit allowed another run to score. Sanford Coggins accounted for the final three runs on a seventh inning bases loaded triple.

Brad Snedeker started and pitched four fine innings allowing just three hits while striking out seven and walking two. But the junior righthander was touched for three hits and two walks to begin the horrid fifth. Reliever Dave Drury was roughed up for six hits and two free passes before retiring the side.

"This is a big week for us," said Salomon, before the game. "Many of our players are just coming out after the end of basketball so we're trying to get together right now. A little success would help us right now to get some.

Bonita (0-3) visits Northview Friday at 3 p.m.

S.D. girls still on top

Lori Rucker scored 14 points and Kathy Macy added 11 to lead San Dimas High to a 49-37 victory over Ontario in Hacienda League girls basketball action Tuesday.

Miss Rucker, for the second time this year, went six-for-seven at the free throw line to pace the Saints, who are now 3-0 in league play. They'll visit Royal Oak Thursday.

In another Hacienda League outing, Robin Hayden scored 13 points to pace Bonita to a 44-34 triumph over Gladstone. The Bearcats are now 2-1 in league play.

Over in the San Antonio League, Sharon Botsford poured in 27 points in leading Pomona Catholic to a 62-26 triumph over Garey. P.C. is now 2-1 in SAL competition.

Pomona star top scorer

Geoff Northrop of Pomona-Pitzer is the winner of the Progress-Bulletin scoring derby for four-year colleges.

The sophomore center is the first Sagehen player ever to win the award. Northrop scored 419 points in 21 games for an average of 20 points a game.

Guard Joe Sills of Cal Poly was next with an 18.8 average. Northrop's teammate, forward Brandon Boyd, tied for third with forward Ken Lukhard of Azusa Pacific at 17.3 points per game.

Both Northrop and Boyd were first-team All-SCIAC selections. Azusa Pacific had the most players, three, of any school. Besides Lukhard, Mike Leatherby and Keith Walker of the Cougars finished among the top 10 with six.

Claremont-Mudd has pitching depth

Claremont-Mudd and Azusa Pacific were winners in college baseball Tuesday while Pomona-Pitzer lost.

Claremont-Mudd got shutout pitching from four pitchers in a 15-0 lacing of visiting Biola. APC scored two runs in the 12th inning to defeat Cal St. Los Angeles, 6-4, at CSLA.

Pomona-Pitzer gave Pacific Christian a whale of a battle only to lose, 16-14, in 11 innings.

C-M, 3-4, plays a doubleheader Saturday at Biola. APC, 8-2, hosts Westmont for a pair Saturday. Pomona-Pitzer, 0-3, is at Pacific Christian for two games Saturday.

At CMC, coach Bill Arce used, Ian Wilcox, Rich Glaze, Norm Richards and Joe Maiberger in blanking Biola. Wilcox went the first four innings, allowed two hits. Glaze hurled hitless ball in the fifth and sixth and picked up the win. Richards allowed two hits but no runs in one inning and Maiberger one hit and no runs in the last two innings.

Wynn Moore was the batting star with a triple and home run and five runs batted in. Jon Begerow had a double and two singles, batted in a run and scored two. Bob Turek had a single and bases-loaded double for three rbis.

A leadoff home run by Mike Odum and an rbi single by Lonnie Geary gave APC its win over CSLA. After the Diablos took a three-run lead in the third inning, the Cougars tied it in the sixth with a bases-loaded pinch double by Ed Shaw.

Pacific Christian pitchers accounted for seven of the visitors' runs at Pomona College. Mike Edwards cracked a three-run homer in the third inning and added a sacrifice fly to personally account for four runs. Gary Whittaker smashed a three-run homer in the 10th inning.

The Sagehens held leads of 4-0 and 8-5. But each time Pacific Christian tied it. The visitors scored five times in the 10th, but the 'Hens came back with five runs in the last of the 10th.

Leading hitter for the 'Hens was Chris Dialynas who drove in four runs with three singles. Greg Holden had a double and single, drove in three runs and scored four.

Mission race ends tonight

Leading scorer and team captain Russ Williams has been declared meligible because he has been residing outside of the Chaffey College district and the Panthers have forfeited three Mission Conference games.

Chaffey, struggling through a 4-24 season before Williams was lost, is now 0-15 in conference play and 1-27 overall going into tonight's season-ending basketball game with Southwestern on the Panther court at 8 p.m.

He led the team in field goals (267), free throws (109), points (523), average (20.1) and rebounds (265).

In other Mission Conference play tonight, champion Riverside (14-1) hosts second place Grossmont (12-4), while Citrus (6-9) visits Palomar (9-6) and San Diego (4-11) hosts Saddleback (3-12).

Chaffey had won games over Saddleback, San Diego and Southwestern before Williams was declared meligible.

Citrus greets prep tracksters

Citrus College will stage the eighth annual Foothill Invitational, featuring 14 foothill area high schools, this Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Citrus College Stadium. Tickets for the event are $1 for adults and 50c for students.

The field events, contested as three-man teams, will start at 10 a.m. and the 21 track relay events will start at 11:30 a.m. Competition will be in three classifications; varsity, sophomore, and freshman.

USC enjoys walking past Broncos, 4-2

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Correspondent

LOS ANGELES — The first collegiate night game ever at Dedeaux Field was one that coach John Scolinos and the rest of the Cal Poly Pomona baseball squad would just as soon forget.

The University of Southern California used no less than 12 walks issued by Bronco pitchers to score four runs and hold off Cal Poly to post a 4-2 victory Tuesday night at the recently opened Trojan diamond.

Bronco starter Vic Bernal surrendered eight of those free passes, and the Trojans cashed them in for a 3-0 lead after four innings.

USC opened the game's scoring in the bottom of the third as walks to Marvin Cobb and Bobby Mitchell and Steve Kemp's single produced a 1-0 Trojan lead.

The Trojans pushed that advantage to 3-0 in the last of the fourth when Bernal walks to Denniks Littlejohn and Cobb set up a two-run single by Kemp.

Feeling that plate umpire Bob Beban was not exactly helping Bernal's control problems, Scolinos and assistant coach Gary Marks became embroiled in a dispute with the arbitrator. The net result was that both men were given the heave-ho by Beban, much to the displeasure of Cal Poly fans in attendance.

The ejections seemed to fire up the Broncos, as they put together a rally in the top of the sixth.

With relief pitcher Ty Meyer on the mound replacing Trojan starter George Milke, a walk to Pete Alexander, a single by Dennis Sherow and Ken Hellyer's booming double off the rightfield fence netted the Broncs two quick runs and narrowed the USC lead to 3-2.

Hellyer made it to third with one away, but died there as Meyer fanned Bob Mosco and retired Dave Metkovich on a tapper back to the box.

The Trojans came back in the last of the sixth to score a big insurance run off Bronco fireman Gilbert Molina. With two away, Cobb drew a free pass (the 12th of the game by Poly pitchers), stole second and third and scored as Molina unleashed a wild pitch.

A nifty doubleplay turned in by Citrus JC transfer Phil Doktor killed the last serious Cal Poly comeback attempt in the seventh frame. With runners at first and second and one away, Doktor ranged in front of second base to grab Alexander's grounder, tagged second and fired to first to double up Alexander and end the inning.

On the contest, Poly outhit the Trojans nine to five, but all four Trojan tallies were set up by the wildness of Bernal and Molina.

Poly, now 4-8 on the season, will try to break its four-game losing streak today at 2:30 p.m. as the Broncs host Loyola. For USC, the victory left their season ledger reading 6-4.

Oregon State must cut athletic budget by $300,000

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — The Oregon State University Board of Intercollegiate Athletics voted Monday night to recommend reductions in the athletic department budget totalling more than $300,000 over the next two years.

The recommendation, sent to OSU President Robert Macvicar, sets up the possibility of phasing out scholarships in track, baseball and wrestling beginning next year.

The recommendation further promotes consideration of dropping funding entirely for golf, swimming and crew.

Comm Henness, Athletic Department business manager, said that while the recommendation calls for reduction of expenses by $310,000, the methods of doing so are not yet defined. Henness said it is possible that while the board recommends reduced expenditures of $83,000 next year, the actual figure could be $100,000, and the following year, due to the possibility of increased income, the reduction would only have to be $150,000.

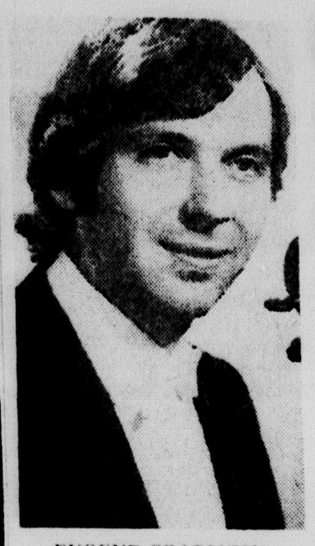
Orchestra to perform at Chaffey



EUGENE GRATOVICH

The Chaffey District Honor Orchestra, conducted by Clyde Owens, will present its spring concert in Spring Auditorium, Chaffey High School, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Violin soloist will be Eugene Gratovich, who has performed with major orchestras in this country and in Europe. Gratovich has also won critical acclaim for his violin recitals both here and abroad.

He will play compositions by De Falla, Bach and Paganini, accompanied by pianist Kathreen Prout.

Met baritone plans recital in Claremont

Metropolitan Opera baritone Sherrill Milnes will present his first Southern California recital in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 8:15 p.m. March 15.

Milnes has also appeared with the Viewnna Staatsoiper, London's Covent Garden, London Opera Society, Milan Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires and the Chicago and San Francisco opera companies.

Born and raised on a farm in Illinois, he is a graduate of Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa.

Assisting Milnes at the piano will be Jon Spong. He and Milnes have been friends since their student days at Drake where both men studied voice with Andrew White.

Milnes has selected compositions by Marcello, Brahms, Giordano, Leon Cavallo, Duparc and Copland.

Tickets are available at central box office Bridges Auditorium, Claremont and at Mutual and Liberty agencies.

Music group to feature Monteverdi

Musica Pacifica, conducted by Paul Vorwerk, will present its final concert of the season in Fritchman Auditorium, 2936 W. Eighth St., Los Angeles, at 8 p.m. March 16.

The program will feature "In illo tempore" from Monteverdi's "1610 Vespers."

The Musica Pacifica ensemble and the Pacifica Singers are joined by consorts of early wind and string instruments in a collection of festive, celebrative and antiphonal cathedral-style music.

Antiphonal music sung or played in alternating, responsive parts, characteristically separated the choruses, or instruments, throughout a cathedral for more dramatic affect.

Director Vorwerk's antiphonal selections are two double choruses — an elaborate setting of Psalm 84 by Heinrich Schuetz, "How lovely are thy dwelling places"; and "Jubilate Deo," a motet by Giovanni Gabrieli.

A series of dramatic works by Schuetz, one a biblical story of Lazarus, complete the program.

Tickets are available for $4 at all Mutual agencies, at Fritchman Auditorium the evening of the performances, or by writing to Box 49224, Los Angeles 90049.

Campuses to age

While today's typical college is a "youth" ghetto," campuses in 1980 will include large numbers of senior citizens and women of all ages, predicts Dr. Edward B. Lindaman, president of Whitworth College, Spokane, Wash.

STARRY EYED—Janet Gaynor plays the Academy Award winning actress, Esther Blodgett, in the original version of "A Star Is Born." The movie will be shown at Garrison Theater, Claremont, at 7:30 tonight as one of the Great Ladies of the Screen Film Festival sponsored by the Curtain Raisers to raise funds for Garrison. Tickets are $2.50 general, $2 for students. The film also stars Frederick March.

C-W stars to appear at Swing

Country-western stars Tom T. Hall and Donna Fargo will present a show in Swing Auditorium, San Bernardino, March 14 as the first program of the 60th National Orange Show March 13-23.

Tickets to the western show, priced at $6 and $5, will admit the bearer to the grounds when purchased in advance. Tickets are available at the Orange Show ticket agency, Ticketron, Liberty and Mutual outlets.

Hall's "Songs of Fox Hollow" is currently No. 3 on Billboard's country LP list and is still climbing. The No. 2 spot on Billboard's country singles list also finds Hall with "I Care-Sneaky Snakes."

Over the past year, Hall has made concert appearances ranging from New York to Australia, and he has been featured on several network television shows. He has also made a name for himself with his song-writing.

Miss Fargo was recently named "the next queen of country music" by Country Music magazine's Mel Shestack.

Free & Easy to open at Little Joe's

The duo, specializing in a wide variety of music including rock, pop, folk and country-western, will perform from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursdays through Saturdays.

Free & Easy has appeared widely throughout the Southland.

What happened to the breakfast you ate this morning?

The food we eat gives our bodies the energy it needs to work and play and grow. But food must be digested before it can be used.

As you ate breakfast, your teeth chewed the food into small pieces. Saliva from your mouth moistened the food so you could swallow it easily.

When the food reached your stomach, powerful muscles in the walls of the stomach churned the food and mixed it with digestive juices.

When this part of the digestion was finished the food was in a thick, liquid form. It then passed out of the stomach and into the small intestine.

Here other digestive juices helped change the food into particles tiny enough to pass through the walls of the intestine and into the bloodstream.

It in turn carried the digested food to all your body's cells. Unused food leaves the body as waste.

A radio, camera, globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Start St. Patrick's Day with a brunch

Toast the top o' the morning on St. Patrick's Day with a convivial brunch for some favorite friends. Shamrock party invitations urging the gals and guys to observe the wearin' of the green will put everyone in a party mood. Set your table with shamrock paper party goods and your cleanup will be a breeze!

This Blarney Brunch Bake is easy on the budget and bursting with good things to eat . . . golden kernels of corn, hearty coin-sliced sausages, succulent sliced mushrooms, bright green pepper and Swiss cheese. A package of refrigerator crescent rolls form the easy-do crust.

Greet your guests with hot mulled cider and embellish your brunch menu with a platter of fresh fruit or a lime green shamrock salad. If your St. Pat's plans call for a cocktail party instead of brunch, the Blarney Brunch Bake is great served hot-from-the-oven as bite-size appetizers.

BLARNEY BRUNCH BAKE

- 1 10-oz. package whole kernel corn frozen in butter sauce
- ½ of one 10-oz. package smoked sausages coin sliced
- 1 2½-oz. jar sliced mushrooms, drained
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion
- 1 8-oz. package refrigerator crescent rolls
- 2 cups shredded Swiss cheese
- 4 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon oregano, crushed

Cook corn according to package directions. Open pouch and drain butter sauce into small skillet. Add sausage, mushrooms and onion; saute until sausage is lightly browned and onion is translucent. Lightly grease a 9 x 13-inch baking pan. Unroll refrigerator rolls and pat into pan to form a crust about ½ way up the sides of the pan. Spread shredded Swiss cheese over the crust; top with sauteed mixture. Combine eggs, milk, green pepper, salt and oregano; stir in corn. Spoon over cheese and sauteed mixture. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves 8 or makes about 4-dozen appetizers.

Meat pies

A tribute to Cornishmen

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

Long before the invention of insulated lunch boxes, Cornish tin miners in England found a way to carry a hot lunch underground with them.

They wrapped hot-from-the-oven baked meat and vegetable pies in cotton mesh bags, to be reheated at mealtime on shovels held over candles.

Cornishmen who emigrated to the United States in the middle of the last century introduced these pastries to silver miners in Colorado and copper and iron miners on Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

The traditional kind are made with pastry crust, but they are equally good made with bread dough. A frozen fully baked pastry packed in a lunch box or paper bag will defrost to eating temperature by mealtime.

Beef, potatoes, onions and turnips were the customary filling for Cornish pastries. The recipe following uses an unorthodox but delicious and inexpensive pork, apple and onion filling.

Dough for 8 pastries: in a small bowl mix well three-fourths cup unsifted flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, one-and-a-half teaspoons salt and 1 package of active dry yeast. Place one-half cup milk, one-fourth cup water and 2 tablespoons margarine or butter in a small saucepan and, over low heat, bring to 120 to 30 degrees Fahrenheit, or a little hotter than very hot tap water. Margarine or butter does not have to melt. Gradually add liquids to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric stand mixer or 3 minutes with an electric hand mixer; scrape bowl occasionally. Add 1 egg (at room temperature) and one-fourth cup unsifted flour. Stir in enough additional unsifted flour to make soft dough (using two-and one-fourth to two-and three-fourths cups flour in whole recipe). Turn onto lightly floured board, and knead about 8 to 10 minutes, or until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl; turn dough to grease top. Cover, let rise 45 minutes in warm, draft-free place. Dough will not double in bulk. While dough rises, prepare filling.

After 45 minutes, punch dough down, turn onto lightly floured board and cut in half. Roll each half to a 12-inch square and cut each into 4 (6-inch) squares. Place about one-third cup filling in center of each square, moisten edges and fold to make triangles. Pinch edges to seal. Slit tops to allow steam to escape. Brush with glaze made from 1 egg yolk beaten lightly with 1 tablespoon water. Bake in preheated 400-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown. Serve hot, warm or cold.

Pork and apple filling: In a large, heavy skillet, cook one-and-one-half pounds ground lean pork with 1 cup finely chopped raw apple, one-half cup finely chopped onion and 1 clove crushed garlic until pork is browned and vegetables are tender. Stir in one-fourth cup chopped fresh parsley, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon crushed marjoram and one-eighth teaspoon each ground cloves and pepper. Cover and simmer 30 minutes over low heat. Drain and discard excess fat. Off heat, blend 2 tablespoons flour into meat mixture. Add 2 beef bouillon cubes and 1 cup hot water. Return to heat, bring to boil, and simmer 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Cool before filling pies.

Build chocolate igloo for a lavish dessert

Cut a section from the snowy mound of whipped cream-mound you'll reveal a glorious two-tiered chocolate interior. This impressive chocolate "igloo" is a masterpiece of a dessert for chocolate devotees.

Foundation of the dessert is a rich, chocolate-flavored cake layer, made with unsweetened cocoa powder. The domed top is a light' delicate construction of chilled, chocolate-flavored gelatin, molded in a mixing bowl. Thickly covered with sweetened whipped cream, the chocolate "igloo" may then be trimmed with curliques of dark sweet chocolate. Chill the "igloo" well before serving.

CHOCOLATE "IGLOO" DESSERT

Chocolate Gelatin Layer:
- 1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1-3rd cup unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1-3rd cup sugar
- 3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
- 1 2-3rds cups milk
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 3 egg whites
- 3 tablespoons sugar

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water in a small bowl; set aside. Combine cocoa and 1-3 cup sugar in a medium saucepan; add egg yolks and milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture coats a spoon. DO NOT BOIL. Remove from heat; add gelatin mixture, butter and vanilla. Pour into large mixer bowl; cool. Cover and chill until very thick but not set.

Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually add 3 tablespoons sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Beat chocolate mixture 1 minute on low speed or until smooth; gradually blend in beaten egg whites just until combined.

Lightly oil the small bowl of your mixer for deep 1½-quart mixing bowl), and line with plastic wrap. Pour in gelatin mixture and chill.

Chocolate Cake Layer:
- ¼ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
- ½ cup boiling water
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2-3rd cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¾ cup all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ teaspoon baking powder
- ⅛ teaspoon salt

Topping:
- 1 to 1½ cups whipping cream
- 3 to 5 tablespoons confectioners' sugar

Blend cocoa and boiling water in a small bowl; cool. Cream butter or margarine, sugar, egg and vanilla until fluffy. Combine flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt; add alternately with cocoa mixture to creamed mixture, beating until batter is smooth. Pour into a well-greased and floured 8-inch round cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes; cool completely.

To Assemble Igloo: Place cake layer on serving plate. Unmold gelatin onto cake layer, allowing a 1-inch edge; carefully remove plastic wrap. Beat whipping cream with confectioners' sugar until stiff. Spread over Igloo. Garnish with chocolate curls, if desired. 10 to 12 servings.

Lare Chocolate Curls: Melt 2 dark sweet chocolate bars (1.05 ounces each) in the top of a double boiler over hot, not boiling water. Spread thinly on the back of a 9-inch square baking pan. Chill 10 minutes or just until set. (If chocolate is too firm, let stand at room temperature a few minutes to soften.) Score into 1½-ix 1-inch pieces. Roll each piece lengthwise into a curl with a metal spatula.

Leftovers with a flourish inside crispy patty shells

Leftovers are a challenge to even the most clever cooks. They can be appealing or appalling. But sauced the convenient way with canned soups and served with a flourish in patty shells of flaky puff pastry, they can be even better the second time around.

Chicken Divan in patty shells is a perfect example of how small amounts of leftovers can be turned into an elegant, easy main course for the family or guests. It is typical of the practical suggestions featured in the new booklet "Quick 'N' Easy Patty Shell Primer."

Illustrating the versatility of patty shells, the booklet contains suggestions for breakfast, brunches, main courses, vegetables and desserts. Given also are the general directions for baking and tips for fillings, garnishes and advance preparation and storage.

To obtain a copy of the new booklet, send your request with a self addressed stamped envelope (monarch or business size), to Patty Shell Booklet, Pepperidge Farm, Incorporated, P.R. Department, Norwalk, Connecticut 06856.

British broker sees growth in buying of gold

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's investors joined the gold rush last year as never before but buying of the precious metal may even grow more this year, a leading bullion broker said recently.

Samuel Montague said Britons bought 50 tons of newly minted gold coins in 1974 and the country imported 10½ tons in January this year worth more than $62.4 million.

World-wide investors and private hoarders piled up 800 tons of gold last year —more than half the 1,400 on the market. About one-third of the hoarding was in newly minted coins.

South Africa turned out 100 tons of Krugerrands, Austria 70 tons of coins, Mexico 67 and Hungary 15. Britain's Royal Mint produced 14 tons of sovereigns.

WHAT'S IN STORE

"FOOD FADS FOOL"

This is National Nutrition Week and the American Dietetic Association has chosen this title as the theme for their promotions. It is their concern that people be made aware of some of the fallacies and misconceptions that exist about food. Much money is wasted annually on costly preparations that have not proved to insure such promised results as immediate weight loss or instant vitality and long life.

One of the statements being published by this respected organization is, "People can get all the nutrients they normally need by eating a balanced diet of a wide variety of foods from the supermarket." Dr. Hans Fisher, Chairman of the Department of Nutrition at Rutgers University, also emphasizes, "Housewives who are health-conscious can stretch their shopping dollars by using the supermarket as a health food store."

Here are a few tips to save money and yet have a balanced diet. (1) Use Budget Burger frequently. Nutritionally, it equals ground beef and stretches your protein dollar. (2) Eggs, peanut butter, and poultry are other very inexpensive sources of protein. (3) Buy natural cereals and whole grain breads for maximum cereal nutrition. (4) Non-fat powdered or fresh milk is a best buy for that category of the basic food groups. (5) Fresh, in-season produce, so abundant here in the West, provides one of the least expensive and richest sources of a wide variety of vitamins, minerals and other nutrients.

All our Alpha Betas have nutritional posters explaining the use of the nutrition labels now found on many food packages. If you would like a brochure telling you how to use these labels, ask your Man in Blue or drop me a note requesting this information.

Smart buying tips

How to fill the larder and avoid bankruptcy

How do you fill your breadbasket without breaking the breadwinner? One of the nation's leading financial service organizations suggests 12 tips for coping with today's high food costs.

It takes careful planning and some effort, says C.I.T. Financial Services, which serves both individuals and businessmen through a nationwide network of more than 800 branch offices. C.I.T. offers these suggestions to help the homemaker stretch food dollars to the limit.

Stock up on sale items. "Loss leaders" are offered to lure customers into the store. Especially shop for such staples as canned foods, soaps and frozen foods. They may not be offered at such a low price for a long time.

Buy fruits and vegetables in season and stock storables in your refrigerator freezer compartment or deep freeze. But be sure you don't buy more than you can store properly.

Shop more often to take advantage of unadvertised specials. Most food markets have weekly sales . . . usually before the weekend. Many stores have sales on the traditionally slow days of Monday and Thursday.

Do it yourself. You "pay" for prepackaged convenience foods. A good cookbook and checking the package for ingredients should let you duplicate most of these foods in your own kitchen.

Buy "big." A good percentage of your food dollar goes for packaging. You can save by buying the large, economical size. Also, compare packages for weight and unit price.

Shop around by looking through the pages of your local newspaper for weekly supermarket sales. See if you can make a circle by stopping at different markets to pick up cost-saving items. It may take a bit more time. (But make certain you're not wasting gas on your expedition.)

Clip those "cents off" coupons that appear in newspapers and shopping circulars.

Use a meat tenderizer to make less expensive cuts more tender and tasty. This process also reduces shrinkage.

Serve fish more often. It's high in protein, low in waste, easy to prepare, and more economical than meat.

Consider a garden. You can enjoy fresh produce in season and preserve the remainder for future eating.

Check supermarket private brands. The quality is usually consistent with nationally advertised brands and costs a lot less money.

Shop with cash. With cash you know exactly what you can afford. Remember: the longer it takes you to pay, the more you pay.

FIGHT INFLATION — With this South of the border dish aptly named Mexican stew. It contains only a half pound of meat cubed and browned before adding other ingredients. Beans or rice can be interchanged along with canned tomatoes, green peppers and Mexican peppers (to taste—be careful), sliced green tomatoes to taste and a garnish of grated cheese added shortly before dish is ready to be removed from over or off low fire atop the range. Try varieties of basic dish.

The Inflation Fighter

Plan menus in advance as you check newspaper ads for weekly specials and sales. Keep in mind you will only be saving money if the store is nearby, if the food is the quality you need, if you have a place to keep a large quantity or if you can use all of it. — C.J.

Location is important for room air conditioners. If possible the unit should be located in a north or east window, or at some point where it is shaded during the time it operates. Direct sunlight on the outdoor portion of a room air conditioner can reduce its efficiency by 10 per cent. — M.N., Martinsville, Ind.

Read the labels of cans and packages to learn quality, size and weight of food products. You don't need the more expensive grades of canned fruits and vegetables, especially for stews, soups, fruit cobblers or pies. Lower grades are just as nutritious, but lack uniformity and color. — P.S., Negainee, Mich.

If your car is equipped with automatic transmission it is especially important to take it easy on the gas pedal. Ease up on the pedal at about 18 to 22 miles per hour so the transmission will shift easily into higher gear and save gasoline as well. — F.E., Marquette, Mich.

Surplus entrepreneur

Viet vet sells cheaply

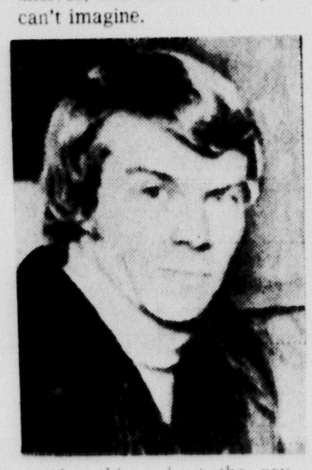
GROVE CITY, Pa. (UPI) — Fred Langner is the federal government's junkman.

He also is a savior of sorts for persons trying to make ends meet in the nation's depressed economy.

Langner, 32, buys articles the government no longer wants— whether it be bulls, typewriters, coal, sports cars or nuts and bolts.

After his employes make any necessary repairs, the enterprising Vietnam veteran then sells the the surplus at prices he says are "pretty cheap"— with a 30-day guarantee often included.

"I've set up a supermarket," Langner said. "You can walk through and it's just like a supermarket—anything you can imagine is on the shelves, and some things you can't imagine.



"One thing about the government surplus thing, it's really booming because of the economy, because I can sell everything pretty cheap."

Lining the bulging shelves of Langner's "Surplus Supermarket" are aerial cameras, calculators, latches, electrical equipment and hospital beds.

Outside you can find a wide assortment of heavy equipment and trucks. And if you get there soon enough you also might be able to purchase two one-of-a-kind government rejects Langner recently obtained: a rebuilt-for-speed Corvette Stingray and a 1972 International Scout with only 36,000 miles and a brand new transmission.

Many of the items Langner buys from the General Services Administration and the military need the special touch of the repairmen Langner employs.

But many others, particularly items such as nuts and bolts, latches, and springs, are brand new, unloaded by the government because someone ordered too many of them.

Langner buys much of his stock sight unseen. A government catalogue might say "10,000 pounds of electronic equipment." It's up to him and his employes to sort out and salvage anything worth selling.

"They sell a lot of junk," Langner said. For instance he made the mistake of buying unseen 24,000 one-foot-long boat paddles—too small to be used by anyone except maybe a precocious six-month-old seaman.

But, Langner said, "On the whole, they have a pretty good program."

The Stingray, confiscated by the government because the owner carried narcotics in it, is "in pretty good shape," he said.

"The only thing, it was made to run—it has straight pipes and all—and it's not legal for Pennsylvania use."

The Scout also was a good buy.

"The woman at the office, the Bureau of Mines down in Virginia someplace, she told my man it was misplaced," Langner said. "They didn't know who owned the vehicle, and they knew it needed a transmission, so they called Washington and they said to sell it."

Once Langner was able to buy up about 5,000 tons of coal at $4 per ton when a government building was being converted to gas heat. Since the purchase was made at the start of the energy crisis, he had no trouble selling the stock.

There's only one major item Langner may have trouble reselling: a 2,000 pound registered Devon bull donated by the late Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon to build up the herd at George Washington's Virginia birthplace.

"I don't know what I'm going to do with it," Langner said. "I'm trying to find a home for it."

Langner, who said he learned never to buy a surplus helicopter while piloting them in the Army, says he sometimes wonders why the government sells some of the still usable items it used taxpayers' money to buy.

The controversial touring Chinese exhibit

By WENDY L. WENNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For 22 years the United States was officially blind to the existence of mainland China. Today, a touring exhibition of Chinese history is starting to open American eyes.

"It bridges gaps in human understanding," wrote Mrs. R.A. Wesselmann of Geneva, N.Y., after she viewed the priceless archaeological finds from Chinese antiquity that have been on display since Dec. 13 at the National Gallery of Art.

Those gaps in understanding began to close in 1971 with secret diplomatic overtures that resulted in former President Richard M. Nixon's visit to China the next year and the Sino-American agreement to improve relations.

Then the Chinese sent their Shen Yang acrobatic troupe to America, and now the archaeological finds are proving an even bigger hit.

"Cultural exchange is the most benign, and possibly the most effective, form of political propaganda," the Salem, N.J., Sunbeam said in an editorial praising the Chinese exhibit.

Its arrival at the National Gallery, by way of five other Western capitals, took months of diplomatic haggling by the State Department before the Chinese agreed to take the exhibit to two American cities.

When it closes here March 30 after 15 weeks, the exhibit will move to the Nelson Gallery Atkins Museum in Kansas City for display April 20 through June 8.

There was a burst of bad publicity before the Washington opening because the Chinese insisted on barring journalists from Taiwan, South Korea, Israel and South Africa from a press preview. The National Gallery, in agreement with the State Department, canceled the special showing.

The publishing trade magazine Editor and Publisher said it believed the entire exhibit should have been canceled. The Waterbury (Conn.) Republican said: "Any exhibitions which China wishes to send to the United States will be appreciated by the American people. But it must be made crystal clear that the Chinese cannot meddle with our liberties."

Once it did open, however, the show was acclaimed as "overwhelming" and "superb" by gallery visitors.

The 385 pieces in the show, all unearthed since the 1949 Communist revolution, span the ages from the skull of Lantian Man (600,000 B.C.) to a stunning piece of Chinese art, the bronze galloping horse (100 A.D.). Also displayed with a very straight face are a pair of 2,300-year-old dumplings someone never ate.

It took an act of Congress to insure the exhibition for $51 million before it could go on display in America.

"The image we had of the Chinese as a gray, faceless mass of people doesn't square with the high degree of creativity, artistry and skill that's exhibited at the National Gallery," said Steve Johnson, who moved to Washington recently from Des Moines, Iowa.

Johnson said he believed tourists who "take the trouble to seek out the Chinese exhibit when they visit Washington are more likely to represent an opinion-making or influential element in their own communities back home.

"I suspect large numbers of high school teachers, religious people, business leaders and journalists will take their impressions and sense of respect for the Chinese civilization back to the provinces."

And they have. From hometowns across the country, some of the 5,000 daily exhibit visitors have written notes to the National Gallery.

Dr. and Mrs. I. A. Gail of Lexington, Ky., called it "one of the most interesting exhibits of the decade. It is superbly planned and both visually and intellectually stimulating. It was indeed a rare privilege."

Susan Herring Taynton of Taylors, S.C., a missionary's daughter born in Shantung province, China, wrote: "I will always count the hours I spent viewing the archaeological finds some of the most fascinating of my life, 16 of which were spent in Chengchow, Honau."

Dick Wolfe of State College, Pa.: "An exciting exhibit—thank goodness the Chinese government has let us see its discoveries."

Lillian Zerwick, who came down from New York, told UPI that "Mao Tse-tung has expressed to the whole world the great feeling of international beauty and love which is common to all mankind, and (the exhibit) is there on loan to us for everyone to behold."

"This is the new world," she said.

One of the few complaints came from Randall Husbauel, 9, of Chevy Chase, Md. "It was very good but as I am a child I could not see some of the exhibits because they were too high," he wrote.

Finnish sweet tooths

By PHILIP M. STONE

HELSINKI (UPI) — Health officials have warned Finns that sugar is so dangerous they would ban it as a food additive if it were newly discovered. That's a bitter pill for some of the world's largest per capita sugar eaters.

Health officials have launched a campaign to cut in half the 97 pounds of sugar each Finn eats yearly on the average. Dentists say tooth decay is the country's most common physical complaint. The government also wants to reduce its sugar industry subsidy which cost taxpayers $55 million last year.

With the aid of health officials, the state-run television network produced two successive films condemning excess sugar use. The films, each shown nightly in prime time after the news, warned there was a direct relationship between excess sugar consumption and tooth decay and weight problems.

"If sugar at this moment were just discovered and all the currently known harmful effects were known, this kind of substance would not be approved as an added ingrediant for food," said Dr. Heikki Tala, assistant dental director of the National Board of Health.

As the films ended their run, the government gave a $145,000 grant to the board of health for a campaign to reduce sugar use.

"It would be nice to think they gave us the money because of the health problem, but I'm afraid they did it to cut down on the subsidy," Tala said.

A sales manager for a large Finnish sugar company who asked he not be named explained the industry each year receives a government subsidy to remain competitive with world prices. He said the government wants to cut sugar use to save subsidy money.

"The government is politically reluctant to change the price of sugar," he said. "But if it doesn't, then the subsidy costs too much. So they began a campaign to stop consumption. It was a very nice ..solution. If they can say sugar is dangerous then they save money."

Tala and Seppo Vihtonen, the producer of the television films, denied the government had any part in suggesting or making the films.

"Already every third 2-year-old has cavities, more than 70 per cent of four-year-olds, and nearly every 10-year-old," Tala said in the films.

Dr. Tero Kangas, a specialist in diabetes, said, "As a result of sugar use there is overweight and because of that diabetes, high blood pressure, coronary artery diseases and wearing away of bones. Sugar is not necessary in food."

The films did not please the sugar industry. The food industry association complained the film was "biased, misleading, untrue, and made one-sided statements."

Nuclear steel making?

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A process using nuclear energy to make steel may be developed within 15 years and it will be cleaner than the current method, according to the director of research for Bethlehem Steel Corp.

Dr. Donald J. Blickwede told the Association of Iron and Steel Engineers this week that most concepts for applyingatomic power to steelmaking were based on using the nuclear energy to generate electricy that is used to melt the sponge iron and refine it into steel in an electric furnance.

Blickwede said the steel industry was focusing on the possible use of nuclear energy because of soaring costs and uncertain energy supplies. Nuclear energy, he added, would supplement the use of fossil fuels such as coal, oil and natural gas and thus would extend existing energy reserves.

Cheaper rates for bigger utility users is challenged

By CLAUDIA WATERLOO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Environmental and consumer groups are doing legislative battle throughout the country against the "cheaper by the dozen" rates that utility companies charge their biggest industrial users of electricity.

Cheaper rates for large users is like "selling gas at a premium to Cadillacs rather than Volkswagens because they use more," said Richard Morgan of the Environmental Action Foundation, a private clearing house for utility reform efforts.

The foundation reports more than 500 citizen groups throughout the nation are campaigning for more equitable utility rates. So far, the issue has been fought on the state level, where regulatory agencies control rates.

The reformers say homeowners and other small customers have been forced to subsidize costly power plant expansion prompted by growing industrial demand.

In Vermont, State Rep. Martin E. Powell is reintroducing a bill that would guarantee basic minimal electrical needs at a reasonable, fixed price for residential users who now pay a higher rate than industry.

"Everyone is entitled to some electricity for life," Powell said.

His so-called "Lifeline" rate would make sure the homeowner with such added nonessential demands as recharging batteries or heating a second home "can't get that any cheaper than you can get it for your cooking and washing," Powell said.

Similar legislation is before the Massachusetts legislature. Both measures are intended to reverse the power companies' practice in most states of charging less for each additional block of electricity used.

The Vermont General Assembly last year overwhelmingly defeated Powell's first Lifeline bill, developed by the Vermont Public Interest Group, after opponents charged it would undermine the rate-setting authority of the state regulatory agency.

Scott Skinner, director of the citizens group who helped Powell rewrite the bill, said it would commit the utilities to a rate structure encouraging energy conservation in three ways:

—Pricing that would favor greater electrical use during nonpeak hours, when demand is lower and less efficient older equipment is not in use.

—The first block of electricity sold to residential users would cover basic household necessities, about 300 to 400 kilowatt hours a month or enough for an oil heater, a black-and-white television set, ordinary lighting and small appliances. The price, determined by the regulatory agency, could not exceed that of any successive block.

—The bill would prohibit a customer service charge. Vermont's largest electrical utility company, Central Vermont Public Service Co., adds a $5 monthly service charge to every customer's bill to cover administrative and other prorated costs.

The company leveled rates last year so larger users no longer enjoy price incentives.

Robert E. Schill, company vice president, said the minimum Lifeline price Powell proposed last year would force large users to subsidize customers who limit themselves to low-cost electrical necessities covered by the bill. Skinner cites this as an advantageous incentive to energy conservation.

Ronald E. Bogard, director of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, said he hopes his state legislature will approve the Lifeline plan as a temporary measure while the general rate structure is analyzed.

Critics of Lifeline say it is no answer for the poor man burdened by rocketing electricity costs. "It may not be very efficient to give someone more electricity when what they really need is money," said Dr. Ernst Habicht of the Environmental Defense Fund. "Lifeline is not a forward-looking approach."

Habicht believes the only long-range solution is to reduce electrical production costs. One way is to charge more for peak demand during certain hours of the day, as Madison, Wis., has done.

In the dispute over who to bail out first—the utilities, the environment or the small customer—Bogard says Lifeline "may not make a long-range difference but in the interim, it makes sense."

Will there be enough home canning lids and jars for yard gardens?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spring at this point may be only a flickering hope kept alive by the arrival of an occasional seed catalogue in the mail.

But for many consumers burned by last year's shortage of home canning equipment, there's one spring problem that must be dealt with now. Will there be enough canning equipment around this year to warrant putting in an order for seeds?

Writes a reader in Ionia, Mich.:

"After the experience many garden growers had last year trying to purchase canning supplies to preserve the fruits of their hard (and I do mean hard) labor, it would make anyone think twice before planting a garden this year.

"With a world-wide food shortage the President is crying to conserve and the consumer is crying high prices, it's pretty damn ridiculous that the people who always grew their gardens and preserved their harvests cannot buy the necessary items to do so."

"It is also a shame that big business can monopolize an industry to the point that the labor people cannot purchase such small items as can lids in an effort to help their own survival as well as conserving bushels of fruit and vegetables that have to rot ..."

Well, the initial reading on this year's situation is that it will be better than last year. The production of jars, lids and other canning equipment is up 30 per cent. But it also appears seed buying is up.

That's the word at least from the office of Virginia Knauer, President Ford's consumer adviser. Her staff has been riding herd on the canning problem for some time and has been receiving stacks of letters similar to the one printed above.

Part of last year's problem, according to the industry, was a shortage of raw materials, especially tin and soda ash. But they've been able to step up production since then. The unknown factor, of course, is demand.

It seemed more people than ever got into home canning last year in an attempt to end-run inflated food prices. The fact that seed buying is up this year may well indicate another big summer for home gardens.

Then, too, there was some hoarding last year. And at least one company has conceded it put out some lids that were defective —and it offered affected consumers refunds last year.

So right now it appears there will be a lot better chance of your being able to buy canning equipment this year —provided no one hoards. And to put down another rumor, so far as we can detect there is no seed shortage developing, although with increased buying it wouldn't hurt to order now to make sure you get what you want.

Recent news stories about a study on mobile homes by the Center for Auto Safety, Washington, have produced several letters asking where copies of the study are available. They may be found in some bookstores but the best bet would probably be to write the Cen- Building, 1346 Connecticut Ave. NW, Washington D.C. 20036. The price is $10.95.

Pass on your suggestions or questions to Buyer's Billboard, care of UPI, 315 National Press Building, Washington D.C. 20045.

Orange-banana cup

A penny pinching but nutritious noon meal

Don't let a busy schedule mean a scanty lunch at your house. Remember a nutritious lunch is just as important for the homemaker as it is for husband or school children.

Fresh California-Arizona oranges add variety, plus important nutrients to a quick but attractively served lunch. They also give needed energy for a more productive afternoon at home, office or school.

Fresh Orange and Banana Cup is the eye-catcher of this lunch at home. With sweet, juicy California-Arizona oranges, dessert is ready in minutes. Serve with favorite soup, toasted cheese sandwiches, crisp celery sticks and a glass of milk.

FRESH ORANGE AND BANANA CUP
(4 to 5 servings)

4 California-Arizona oranges, peeled, cut into bite-size pieces
1 banana, peeled, sliced
¼ cup fresh squeezed orange juice

Combine orange pieces and banana slices: toss lightly with orange juice. Chill until ready to serve. Spoon into dessert dishes and serve. Sweeten slightly, if desired.

Stuffed roast

Stuffed beef roast is special enough for your grandest entertaining effort. Select a boneless, compact roast such as eye of round, rib eye or chuck tender. Slice lengthwise, open up and spread surfaces with liver paste and mixed chopped vegetables or mushrooms. Then tie back together and roast, uncovered until medium rare for juicy, tender beef. When sliced, it looks beautiful and tastes extra flavorful — garnish with the same vegetables used in the stuffing.

Cold buffet

Cold beef buffet is great to serve anytime of day. Just set out trays of chilled and sliced cooked or roasted beef, a selection of breads, vegetables and condiments, fruits and cheeses. Marinated beef tongue, roast beef and corned beef are popular choices. So are pot roast or a meat loaf made with beef. Guests fill their own plates for a simple but sumptuous repast.

Year long trip to Mars for Viking lander

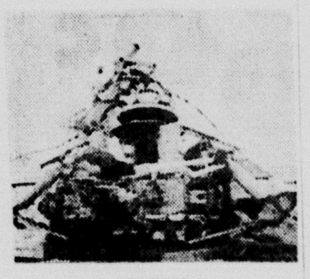
By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Engineers dressed like surgeons in an operating room are preparing a couple of three-legged robots called Vikings for flight to Mars this summer to open man's search for life on another planet.

If everything goes according to plan, the first Viking will roar away from Earth Aug. 11 and land gently near the mouth of a winding Martian channel on July 4, 1976, the nation's 200th birthday.

The second will follow 10 days later and land close to the north polar icecap where moisture in the thin Martian atmosphere should be at a seasonal high.

The two robots will use cameras, weather sensors and other instruments, but their priority assignment is to scratch, dig and scoop up Martian soil for organisms that can withstand the rigors of the planet's cool, dry climate.



VIKING

To detect life on Mars, the landers must be free of bugs from Earth. At biologists' latest count, the first Viking carried 32,256 organisms. So in June, the spacecraft will be baked at 233 degrees Fahrenheit in a special sterilizing oven for 40 hours.

Meantime, project officials are taking other extraordinary precautions at the Kennedy Space Center to minimize the number of organisms on the spacecraft and keep dust and other foreign objects out of their delicate works.

The Vikings are housed in separate "clean rooms" in buildings once used to prepare two-man Gemini capsules for flight. Anyone entering the hospital-like enclosures must wear white smocks, caps, boots, gloves and—if he is bearded—masks, and must pass through an entry lock to be scoured by jets of air.

Each Viking consists of two spacecraft, a lander and an orbiter. The latter will circle Mars to scout the landing site before releasing the lander, and will serve as a communications relay satellite once surface studies begin.

The orbiters are a new generation of the Mariner 9 spacecraft that photographed most of Mars in 1971 and 1972. The landers are brand new, and their development problems have more than doubled the cost of the Viking project, to more than $1 billion.

STERILE ROOM

Now, says Richard Cook of the Martin Marietta Corp., the first Viking is "in beautiful shape". His company built the lander in Denver under the guidance of NASA's Langley Research Center. The orbiter was built by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif.

The first lander, coated with a resilient gray latex paint to withstand Martian sandstorms, is undergoing painstaking checks on a stand on one side of the clean room. Its three legs and simple aluminum footpads are folded so they will fit inside a white cover that will protect the craft while it enters the the Martian atmosphere.

Unlike the Apollo spacecraft that landed on the airless moon, the Viking lander carries a 50-foot parachute that will pop out at an altitude of 20,000 feet above Mars. At 5,000 feet, the chute will be jettisoned and three rocket engines will take over to ease the lander onto the surface.

Once on Mars, the Viking's computer will fix the craft's location so its dish-like antenna can be pointed toward Earth. Then begins what officials hope will be at least three months of surface studies, with nuclear generators keeping the Viking's batteries charged.

The two Vikings will be the first to search for life on Mars. A camera-equipped Russian spacecraft landed on the planet in 1974, but its radio failed 2 1-2 minutes after touchdown.

The Viking landers, nine feet wide and weighing 2,300 pounds, will carry three life detection instruments corresponding to a complete biochemistry laboratory.

Acting on commands from Earth received 20 minutes later, one instrument will look for life forms that function like Earth organisms by metabolizing food and producing carbon dioxide. In this device, a few drops of a nutrient containing radioactive carbon will be added to a pinch of dug-up soil. If it contains Earth-like bugs, they will release radioactive carbon dioxide which the Viking can detect.

A second instrument will use radioactive carbon dioxide and artificial sunlight to promote photosynthesis if any plant-like organisms exist. The third experiment will use a sealed cup to analyze gases, which all known organisms produce or absorb as part of their life process.

Proper timing

Proper timing of traffic signals is extremely important, say engineers at the Highway Users Federation in Washington, D.C. A California study showed a fuel savings of 19 per cent by simply retiming a

Childlessness

It's estimated 12 million are afflicted with infertility

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

Many childless couples hoping to make a date with the stork need help.

They add up to a big problem. But the scope of their problem —infertility —isn't very visible. Husbands and wives in this fix don't talk about it.

There are an estimated 12 million infertile persons in America. It works out to a ratio of one in every seven married couples. Many want at least one child.

The points were made in an interview with Dr. Albert Decker.

"There should be no involuntary childless couples in America," he said.

Dr. Decker is director of the New York Fertility Research Foundation, said to be the only out-of-hospital, nonprofit facility in the country where infertility is researched and treated exclusively.

HEAD OF MOVEMENT

He is head of a movement through the foundation to have infertility services established in major cities so millions of couples needing help will find it readily available.

"Many men and women involved have feelings of guilt and an inadequacy over their barrenness," Dr. Decker said.

"Couples do not speak out, ask for attention or sympathy and generally do not advertise what they feel are their shortcomings.

"Only when couples come for examination and possible treatment are the problems brought out into the open."

Such couples are coming in ever-increasing numbers and, according to Dr. Decker, taxing facilities and staff of the foundation.

"Twice as many new patient couples are seeking aid for infertility problems as in previous years and they come from all over the United States —and many foreign countries."

Compounding the problem for childless couples is the scarcity of babies to be adopted. This is due to wide use of the pill and other birth control methods; legalized abortion; the fact that unwed mothers often keep their babies these days. There is less social stigma to being a single parent these days.

NOT ACCEPTED

At the foundation, couples with two children are not accepted unless the present partner had not borne or fathered one of the children.

Couples are denied treatment if they can't support children. The same for couples who want to use parenthood to hold their marriage together.

Research contributes to the foundation's program of comprehensive help for the childless. Varied specialties are combined to explore complexities of infertility.

These include: genetics research, immunology studies, experiments in sex differentiation, advances in sperm pooling and freezing techniques for men with low sperm counts. There also are findings from staff gynecologists and urologists.

A bill before Congress to elicit support for the childless was introduced in January by Rep. Edward L. Koch of New York and Rep. Tim Lee Carter of Kentucky.

In remarks the two told Congress they believe "the right to have a baby" in the United States has been largely overlooked.

The proposed federal legislation aims to provide fellowships and establish research programs in fertility, sterility and the reproductive process.

It seeks also funds to set up specialized treatment centers for infertility diagnosis and treatment.

What about the population "bomb"?

REPLACEMENT DROP

Dr. Decker noted that the National Center for Health Statistics reports birth and fertility rates have reached a new low. The "replacement level" of 2.1 children dropped to 1.9 per family last year.

"There is slight danger of overpopulation in America if infertile couples are helped," Dr. Decker said.

Dr. Charles Westhof, professor of demographic studies at Princeton University and former head of the U.S. Commission on Population, has made points in accord with Dr. Decker's about overpopulation.

He has noted the trend in the U.S. for fewer children and a greater use of birth control methods and abortion by those in childbearing years.

"In demographic terms," Dr. Westhof has said, "the elimination of unwanted fertility toward which we are moving would actually drive the rate of population growth down even further so that efforts toward eliminating problems of infertility would certainly not have any enormous undesirable demographic consequences."

Watergate to plague Republicans

NEW YORK (UPI) — The adverse effects of Watergate will plague the Republican party for at least a decade because the scandal reduced the number of party members who would have been successful future candidates for higher office, according to a report in the Ripon Forum.

"The ripples of Watergate will disrupt Republican politics for at least the next decade," Timothy D. Mead noted in an article in the current issue of the Ripon Forum, a biweekly newsletter of the progressive Republican organization.

"The pool from which credible Republican candidates can be drawn to seek higher office has been substantially reduced by the defeat of many Republican congressmen, state legislators, county commissioners, township supervisors and other local officials in 1974," Mead stated.

Travel

How about a Tunisian vacation for variety?

DJERBA, Tunisia (UPI) — If variety can add spice to your travels, Tunisia could be just your dish. And I don't mean just cous-cous.

It offers sophisticated modern cities and imposing Roman ruins, forested mountains and empty deserts, arid salt beds and thriving green oases, and some of the finest beaches in North Africa.

For seekers after sun, sea and sand, Tunisia has about 800 miles of Mediterranean coastline. Popular resorts include Bizerta and Gammarth on the northern coast and Hammamet and Sousse on the eastern.

Then there is Djerba, the legendary island of the lotus eaters of Homer's Odyssey, in the Gulf of Gabes about 350 miles south of Tunis. Ulysses had to tie and bring back to his ship crewmen who partook of the fruit of indolence and forgot all about home.

The lotus eaters —if there ever were any —are long gone, but visitors now can find other reasons to prolong their stay.

A longtime favorite winter hideaway for such diverse European celebrities as Brigitte Bardot and Willy Brandt, Djerba still has miles of uncrowded white sand beaches for sunbathing (an average of 344 days a year, according to the travel brochures), swimming, snorkeling, water skiing, sailing and other water sports.

It also has about a dozen modern hotels, including three in the top four-star category, at reasonably moderate rates in these days of raging inflation.

We checked in at the newest and biggest —the Dar Jerba, a sprawling modernistic complex of four linked but separate hotels with 1,250 rooms, a half-mile-lang covered shopping mall, seven restaurants and coffee shops, seven bars and cafes, a discotheque, a nightclub, a theater, game rooms, turkish baths, a pool, a beach and facilities for tennis, horseback riding and deep-sea fishing. There is also a special hotel for children, with child-sized furnishings.

It's a lively, swinging place, popular with young Europeans —we met Britons, Scots, Germans and Scandinavians. It is so big, guests are provided with an identification card and a map at the reception desk.

For those who prefer more seclusion, there is the more indigenous Le Menzel (Djerbian for house), comprised of 10 separate two-and-three-story units, with 14 rooms opening on a patio. In a setting of palms and other tropical trees, they look more like desert fortresses than hotel accommodations, with their sheer whitewashed walls, flat roofs and cupolas. There is an exquisite Oriental restaurant, a Moorish cafe, and a nightclub among other amenities in the main reception building. It also has a beach and a pool and offers facilities for land and sea sports.

This pancake-flat island, 17 miles long by 14 miles wide, has more to offer. It is a tropical paradise —fertile with farmlands and vineyards; date, fig, pomegranate and other fruit trees; and gnarled olive trees, some of which are thousands of years old.

Most Djerbians are members of the Quaker-like Kharijite Moslem sect and live, work and dress much as their ancestors did. Camels still plow the fields, draw water from deep wells and carry huge burdens. Women and children tend their flocks of sheep and goats. There are picturesque farming and fishing villages with whitedomed mosques and whitewashed houses with bright blue doors and trimmings.

Certainly not to be missed is Houmt Souk, the capital, main marketplace and center of the island's fishing and rug-weaving industry. Bargain hunters in the souks can find good buys in the famed handmade pottery, hammered copper plates, wool and silk clothing, rugs, blankets and silver jewelry.

Some of the silversmiths are members of the estimated 1,200 Jews still living in Hara Kbira (Big Ghetto) and Hara Sghira (Little Ghetto) only a few miles from Houmt Souk. Hara Sghira is the site of the famous synagogue, the Ghriba, which is said to date back to the pre-Christian era. The ark houses the priceless Torah, written by hand on sheepskins brown with age. The Ghriba holds regular services and is a place of pilgrimage by Jews from other countries after the Passover holidays.

We visited Djerba as guests of the Tunisian National Tourist Office with other American travel writers. We drove over from the mainland on the narrow four-mile-long causeway built originally by the Romans in the second century. Djerba also can be reached by ferry from Jorf and by Tunis Air from Tunis, the gateway for air traffic from Europe and elsewhere.
